Register by Dec. 1 Or Be Outlawed, Utilities Warned

Stocks Will Be Tainted if Action Not Taken, Landis Declares.

Alertness Urged On Stockholders

Decision of Baltimore Judge No SEC Bar, Chairman Says.

By Felix Bruner.

James M. Landis, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, warned utility holding companies yesterday that if they fail to register with the commission by December 1 virtually every one of their corporate acts after that date will bear the stigma of questionable legality.

Landis declared that it was "about time" that stockholders of these companies learned what the officers intend to do. Discussing the decision of Judge William C. Coleman, of the Federal District Court of Baltimore, holding the Wheeler-Rayburn act unconstitutional, Landis admitted that the decision might be used by companies as a reason for not registering with the commission, but pointed out serious consequences of failure to register.

"The commission is not confronted with the necessity for a decision as a result of the opinion," Landis said. "The normal course of procedure will continue. The decision was merely that of one district court of which there are more than 70. Our contention still is that there was no question at issue and that the law is not unconstitutional. The decision is not even conclusive as to the company involved."

Landis said an appeal will be pressed by the commission if it has an opportunity to do so, but pointed out that the commission was not a party to the suit.

"Has No Legal Effect."

"It has no legal effect," he said, "on persons not parties to the decision. From our side, we shall go on functioning normally."

Discussing the question of whether the decision will be used by holding companies as a reason for not registering, Landis said the commission had not been officially

Big Truck Has A Tough Day

2 Drivers, 2 Crashes and a 3-Hour Traffic Tangle Leave It a 'Wreck.'

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 8.—A heavy truck was involved in two collisions, with a different driver for each, today, and police were kept busy arresting one driver, looking for the other and rerouting clamoring motorists around the wreckage.

Traffic was blocked for three hours on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard. The body of the truck was ripped off in the second accident and an assortment of canned goods and lard scattered over the highway.

Brown left Muir at the Halethorpe Police Station and returned with Patrolman Ralph Smith to the scene of the accident. But the big, six-wheeled truck had disappeared.

The officers found the vehicle at the bridge over the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks on the Washington boulevard near Baltimore. It had hit a trailer, crashed into a concrete abutment and lost its cargo. The driver had leaped out of the truck and scrambled down an embankment, according to Marion R. McClellan, operator of the trailer.

With the wreckage blocking the bridge entrance, scores of automobiles bound between Washington and Baltimore were piling up with much impatient honking of horns. Police finally set up a detour. Three hours later, traffic proceeded normally. State and county police were seeking the second driver.

'Extra' Omits Big Story To Spare Suspect's Wife

Toronto, Nov. 8 (AP).—The Toronto Star today issued a special edition of one copy.

From it was eliminated all mention of the major local crime story of the day—the slaying of Ruth Taylor and the arrest of Harry O'Donnell on a charge of murdering the girl.

The one-copy edition was delivered to O'Donnell's wife in a maternity hospital where, last Saturday, she gave birth to a son.

Soaring Stocks Greet Ruling On Utility Act

3,350,000-Share Day Sees Exchange Prices Hit New Year's High.

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 8.—Wall Street gave the Baltimore Federal Court decision invalidating the utility holding company act an uproarious reception today which brought the heaviest trading in more than a year on the stock exchange and more than two years on the curb exchange.

Utility prices were pushed up more than 3 points—many to new 1935 highs—and carried industrials with them.

As result, the Dow-Jones industrial average pushed up to 144.35 for a new high since July, 1931, while the utility average went to a new peak since February 8, 1934. Stock exchange sales approximated 3,350,000 shares, highest since February 7, 1934, while the curb exchange had sales of 1,157,000 shares—the first time this year the total has exceeded 1,000,000, and the highest total since July 21, 1933.

Utilities Posts Hum.

Greatest trading was in the first hour. Overnight buying orders poured into brokerage offices on strength of the Baltimore decision. Board rooms were filled early. The floor of the exchange was crowded. Once the gong sounded, posts at which utilities were traded on the stock exchange hummed with excitement. Blocks of 14,000, then 15,000 shares came out. There was difficulty arranging opening prices. Then Commonwealth and Southern opened 50,000 shares and shortly after United Corporation opened on the same amount of sales.

There was similar experience on the curb exchange. Opening blocks in the multi-thousands appeared and finally Cities Service came out on one opening block of 110,000 shares.

746 Relief Chiselers Found in Buffalo

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 8 (AP).—The Chamber of Commerce reported today it had found 746 relief "chiselers" here by checking pay rolls. It had found that 9,685 persons on relief also were earning money, but explained this did not mean all were defrauding the public, since most of them were not making enough at their jobs to support their families, and the relief authorities were "helping out."

The chamber estimated it was saving the city $832,291 a year through its work.

Plot to Shoot Envoy of U.S. In Cuba Fails

Army Agents Balk Move Aimed to Set the Stage for Revolution.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Havana, Nov. 8.—An unimpeachable source disclosed tonight that a "master plot" to assassinate Jefferson Caffery, United States Ambassador to Cuba, had been thwarted by intelligence operatives of the Cuban army on the eve of its execution.

Reliable sources said army officials were convinced the plot was nipped with the recent arrest of Cesar Vilar, leader of the confederation of labor.

Also scheduled for death, army agents said they learned, was Pepin Rivero, director of the newspaper Diario de la Marina.

Twenty-nine men, these sources said, had been sworn to kill Caffery, who was to be the first to go.

The plot was set for November 1, the day after Vilar's arrest, it was asserted. Six automobiles were ready to carry the assassins to a point already designated, agents disclosed.

Revolt Ultimate Aim.

Army officials expressed belief the plot was inspired by radicals to provoke American intervention in Cuba, in the hope of thus starting a revolution. The plan for the attempt had been rehearsed to the most minute detail, they said.

An army sergeant has been serving as the chief of Caffery's bodyguard for months.

The assassination, it was said, was to take place when Caffery left for home from the embassy last Friday.

Vilar, who is wanted on a number of charges, was arrested October 31 with several associates. A majority of the 20 suspects are still at large.

Caffery has been the target of assassins before. His home on the outskirts of the city shows bullet scars where assailants fired. A soldier guard at the residence was killed when attackers opened fire on it in daylight.

Previous Attacks.

Jefferson Caffery has been the object within the past 18 months of what police called several assassination plots, springing from Cuba's turbulent politics.

At least three attacks were made on his home last fall, around which the Cuban government had thrown a police guard.

Several months earlier a soldier guarding the home was shot to death by attackers in a passing automobile. Numerous persons have been jailed as suspects in the plots.

Caffery, police said, was an intended victim because of his relations with the present Cuban government.

A native of Louisiana, Caffery came to Havana in December, 1933, as personal representative of President Roosevelt. He was made ambassador when the Mendieta government was recognized by Washington.

Vivian Mullon, 20, May Tell Cause of Smash-up.

Petersburg, Va., Nov. 8.—Upon the recovery of Miss Vivian Mullon, 20, of Williston Park, N. Y., dependent disclosure of the causes which sent a plane in which she was a passenger tumbling to earth, killing her sister, Anne, and the pilot, Lafayette Rothsteen, of Port Washington, N. Y.

Miss Mullon, suffering from a concussion of the brain and broken leg, was unable to recall today any of the events which led up to the crash of the plane near the Virginia-North Carolina border in Brunswick County yesterday.

President to Get New Steel Boat To Replace Old Yacht Sequoia

A trim, steel Coast Guard patrol boat of modern design—the Electra—will nose up the Potomac in a few days to displace the Commerce Department's Sequoia as Presidential yacht.

President Roosevelt told reporters yesterday he has decided to part with the familiar little craft aboard which he has passed so many pleasant week-ends down the bay.

The new boat wasn't the President's idea, he told newspapermen. But his friends pointed out the old one was of ancient wooden construction, and not fireproof. Besides, there wasn't room aboard for the White House contingent of Secret Service men.

So the Sequoia has been turned back to the Commerce Department, from which it was borrowed by the Navy. And the larger and faster Electra has entered Norfolk Harbor, where its Coast Guard crew of 40 men and 4 officers will relinquish command to the Navy.

The cutter Cuyahoga, which protectively escorted the Sequoia on its cruises, bearing the President's Secret Service bodyguard, will be turned back to the Coast Guard. On the whole, the Navy will cut expenses in fuel and personnel by the three-cornered transaction, the President said.

The Electra is 165 feet in length, fireproof, has a 25-foot beam, weighs 334 tons, draws 8 feet, and can cut through the water at a speed of 25 knots. Built at Camden in 1933, it is the very latest type of Coast Guard patrol boat. In case of war or other emergency, the boat will be turned back to the Coast Guard for coast defenses, the President pointed out.

Kingsford-Smith Feared Lost in Sea

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Singapore (Saturday), Nov. 9.—Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, famed Australian flier, was feared the prey of man-eating sharks as airplanes and surface ships criss-crossed the Bay of Bengal today seeking the intrepid conqueror of oceans and his co-pilot, P. T. Pethybridge.

Their fast plane, Lady Southern Cross, was due here at 5:30 a. m. Friday (3:30 p. m. Thursday, E. S. T.) on this leg of a flight from England to Australia—a flight Kingsford-Smith has said would be his last over long reaches of ocean.

Two hours after the Lady Southern Cross was due here, C. J. Melrose, another Australian aviator, landed and said he saw Kingsford-Smith desperately fighting a storm over the Bay of Bengal, the plane only 200 feet above tossing waves with flames streaming from the exhaust. Melrose reached here only after a fierce fight over the bay.

Melrose gave Kingsford-Smith's position as 150 miles from shore. The Royal Air Force crew here snapped into instant action to attempt a rescue.

Kingsford-Smith left England early Wednesday on what he said would be a leisurely flight home. But he streaked along at a record pace and when he left Allahabad, India, he was only two and a half hours behind the astonishing time set by Scott and Black, winners of the England-Australia speed derby.

Mothers, Babes Win in March For Nurseries

Fifty Women Told Schools Will Reopen; Transients' Plea Fails.

Fifty mothers, each with at least one child in her arms or clinging to her skirts, marched yesterday to the office of Commissioner George E. Allen and WPA Administraor Harry L. Hopkins to plead for reopening of nursery schools here. They saw neither Allen nor Hopkins, but they came away with dry eyes, victorious.

Theirs was one of the two "marches" focused yesterday upon the Walker-Johnson Building, headquarters of WPA and FERA, and the District Building. The other, whose participants were transients and other needy demanding work, food and shelter, was not quite so successful.

After Dr. L. R. Alderman, Hopkins' buffer, and Ross Haworth, speaking for Commissioner Allen, told the mothers a $186,000 project for reopening the Capital's ten nursery schools is bound for approval they went away cheering.

"We hope the nurseries (closed last Monday) will be open again by the 15th of this month," said Dr. Alderman, director of education for both WPA and FERA.

Sabers, uniforms and college textbooks.

Each found a place on the campus of Howard University yesterday as disciples of peace and students of war clashed in verbal (and almost fistic) combat to join a Nation-wide youth mobilization for world peace.

Howard students led the local Peace Day rally. Officials at George Washington University forbade a demonstration. The movement at American University was sanctioned by Chancellor M. M. Gray, Gray, but both in theory and practice, the meeting embodied peace. Other educational institutions in Washington evidenced no interest.

Howard students, to the estimated number of 125, turned out for the rally. But what they lacked in numbers, they made up with fiery enthusiasm. Promptly at 11 a. m., the student peace advocates gathered in front of Frederick Douglass Memorial Hall. They brought along banners and placards, with capital letters screaming for peace and an end to all wars.

On the sidelines stood a group of R. O. T. C. members—officers with clanking swords and privates with classbooks and grins. They held a

Fullback Zinkievich Scores 3 Times; Gonzaga Crushes Georgetown Prep, 57-0; Washington-Lee Takes Fredericksburg, 21-0.

While Central High School continued to set a warm pace in the interhigh series with a 32-to-2 victory over Roosevelt yesterday, four other games involving high and prep schools of the Washington area were being played. Of especial interest was renewal of the keen rivalry between Devitt Prep and Bullis Prep at Roosevelt Stadium, Devitt winning, 18 to 0, with its great fullback, Adam Zinkievich, of Worcester, Mass., scoring all three touchdowns. A crowd of 1,000 watched the game and another 2,500 witnessed the Central-Roosevelt conflict.

At the same time, Gonzaga High was whipping Georgetown Prep, 57 to 0, at Benning Stadium, in their annual game. The victory gave the Purple the pre-school league championship, won last year by Georgetown Prep. Gonzaga evened an old score with the Garret Parkers, having lost in an upset, 13 to 6, last year.

Over at Ballston, Va., two former George Washington University players, now high school mentors, were pitting their scholastic teams against one another with Coach Johnny Baker's Washington-Lee High eleven outpointing Coach Johnny Fenlon's Fredericksburg High team, 21 to 0. Fredericksburg held the home team scoreless in the first half, but, with Bob Hippler, Jim Fixx and Ray Wheeler leading the advance, Washington-Lee drove to three scores in the last two periods. A 55-yard dash by Fixx was the most spectacular development.

In the only other game played in the section, Landon Prep avenged a 6-0 defeat suffered last year at the hands of Boys Latin High, Baltimore, winning a 6-0 victory, its first of the season.

Norris Says He Won't Run Again in '36

Veteran Nebraskan Tells Paper He Looks to 'Younger Men.'

Friends Hope He Will Reconsider, Express Their Regrets.

By the Associated Press.

Salt Lake City, Nov. 8.—Senator George W. Norris, fighting Republican independent, announced today he is retiring from the Senate—but friends from Nebraska to Washington voiced belief or hope he'll run again.

After 32 years in Congress, including 10 years in the House, the 74-year-old Nebraska veteran told the Desert News:

"I am no candidate. I am getting old. Younger men can and should carry on the work which I have tried to do during my years as Senator."

Friends in Lincoln and Washington took a quick look at the field of possible successors of the rugged little Nebraskan—then expressed doubt Norris will be able to "stand the pressure" of forces urging him to seek a fifth Senate term.

"It's true Norris is not a candidate," one close friend said, "but that doesn't necessarily mean he won't run."

Discounts Race by Borah.

Norris, interviewed in a brief stop here en route to Compton, Calif., to visit a daughter, put at rest the suggestion he might have other political ambitions—perhaps the Presidency—when he said in referring to talk of Idaho's Senator William E. Borah as a possible Republican nominee:

"I don't think he will be a candidate—any more than I will."

Informed of Norris' announcement, Borah said at Blackfoot, Idaho:

"If I could do it, I would command him, for his country's sake to change his mind."

Norris expressed confidence that President Roosevelt, whom he supported in 1932, after having supported Alfred E. Smith in 1928, will be re-elected.

Warned Roosevelt.

Last January, Norris told the Senate that if President Roosevelt "continues to Farleyize his Administration, he may not be President more than two years."

He was author of an "anti-politics" bill under which James A. Farley would have to resign either as Postmaster General or as Democratic national chairman.

But today Norris said:

"His (Roosevelt's) critics offer nothing in exchange for what he has offered. They are chiselers. They attempt to tear down without building up."

The aging but still sturdy and active Nebraskan waged his greatest fight against the so-called "power trust." Yet he had little to say about the decision of a Baltimore judge yesterday that the 1935 holding company act is unconstitutional. The bill is, he commented crisply, "a great advance in utility legislation."

By the Associated Press.

Expressions of regret and hope that he would reconsider were voiced by colleagues at news yesterday that Senator Norris of Nebraska had announced definitely he would not be a candidate for re-election next year.

John Kilman, 25, Found Dead in Car

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Easton, Md., Nov. 8.—John Kilman, 25, of Royal Oak, was found dead in his car near here today with two bullet wounds in his head.

He was discovered by Walter Moore, colored, who had seen the car parked in the same location last night. A .32-caliber rifle was lying across his lap at the time of discovery.

Sheriff Samuel Carroll, who was summoned by Moore, scouted a possibility of foul play and requested an inquest for tomorrow morning.

'Mike Romanoff,' in Virginia, Won't Talk, and Even Has Job

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 8.—Prince Mike is working. That's news. Even more news is the fact that he has been working for four months and hasn't even let out a headline—until today.

Today it was finally revealed that the miniature gentleman with the feathered green Alpine hat, the red-and-yellow striped vest, and the trousers and jacket so impeccable and yet so always odd, the man who has been wandering around Fredericksburg since last summer, is Harry F. Gerguson, self-styled and oft-decried Prince Mike Romanoff.

Back to the farm life from which he soared into the tinsel clouds of Broadway so many years and newspaper files ago, Prince Mike has gone. Now he's overseer for the estate owned by John W. Walters, New York broker, in King George County, 25 miles from here.

Now he calls himself John William Adams. A writer he is, or at least, so he's been saying. He's writing a philosophy of history. Certainly no man is better fitted to write of modern philosophy than the man who built castles of claptrap and mansions of merry mendacity on Broadway for years.

Whether Walters knew who Prince Mike was when he hired him could not be ascertained today. A friend of Walters who declined to reveal his name said at the estate that Mike had been doing a fine job in restoring the beauties of the estate on the Rappahannock River, in the possession

Makale, Gorrahei Captured, Italian Armies Press On

Fortified Position Coveted Objective

Fascists Deny Story 30 Women, 15 Children Killed by Bombs.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Nov. 8.—Gorrahei, gateway to Harar and interior Ethiopia from Italian Somaliland, was stormed and taken today by native troops of Italy's southern army.

The fortified post had been a coveted Italian objective for weeks. It commands caravan trails of southeastern Ethiopia and dominates the water supply of the region.

Asmara advices said the seizure thrust Ethiopian defenses 50 miles back into the southern Ethiopian wilderness. The enemy will have to march 50 miles west and north before they can find an adequate water supply, said the dispatches.

Jumping-Off Place.

At the same time Gorrahei, with its abundant wells, will give Gen. Rudolfo Graziani's advance a good jumping-off place with excellent lateral communications for its next plunge into enemy territory.

The southern army, under the command of Gen. Graziani, apparently is headed toward Harar, in interior Ethiopia. Here, many believe, Italy hopes to have the northern army meet the southern army and thus Italy's occupied territory will connect her colonies of Eritrea and Somaliland.

All caravan trails in southeastern Ethiopia are dominated by Gorrahei, and Italians believed its fall opens the road to Harar.

Planes Clear Advance.

Italian bombing planes paved the way for the advance. There have been reports that heavy forces of Ethiopians fired volleys at the planes.

The Italian government denied a report from Addis Ababa that 30 women and 15 children were killed by bombs in that area.

Announcement of the capture of Makale was made in a one-sentence bulletin from Gen. Emilio de Bono, commander of the armies in East Africa. It said:

"Our flag, which was lowered January 22, 1896, from the fort of Makale, was unfurled anew over that fort at 9 a. m., as the result of the work of national and native troops."

Clipper Completes 1,503-Mile Flight

By the Associated Press.

Acapulco, Mexico, Nov. 8.—(Via Pan-American Airways radio)—The huge China clipper descended to the harbor here at 5:15 p. m. (est) today, completing a 1,503-mile nonstop flight from Miami, Fla.

Capt. Edwin C. Musick brought the 23-ton airliner down in a graceful glide to the surface after first circling the harbor to make sure the water had been cleared of small craft.

The three-stage journey to the base at San Francisco continues tomorrow, with the clipper flying northward along the coast to San Diego, Calif.

Bomb No 'Dud'

Traitor Gugsa, First to Enter Northern Town, Receives Plaudits.

Advance Patrols Push Far Ahead

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

With the Italian Armies at Makale, Ethiopia, Nov. 8.—Italy's legions took Makale today and pushed on south and west to rake deep into the rugged approaches to Lake Tana—lifeblood of the British Sudan.

Leaving the traitor, Ras Gugsa, to celebrate the shotless capture of Makale and receive the plaudits of his subjects, advance guards penetrated many miles beyond the medieval Ethiopian city.

(Far to the south, said dispatches from Rome, Asmara and Mogadiscio, Italian Somaliland, the armies of Gen. Rudolfo Graziani stormed the fortress of Gorrahei, important "gateway to Harrar.")

Squadrons Near Lake Tana.

Native runners from Gen. Pietro Maravigna's column of the right raced into field headquarters to report the western commander had sent "raking squadrons far into the Abo territory which leads to Lake Tana."

The squadrons were proceeding to clear the region of bands of Ras Seyoum's warriors.

The runners also reported one of Maravigna's light infantry units, backed up by mountain artillery, had left the Italian line along the Setit River, facing the troops of Ras Burro, and had cut across country to the southeast to take up a position along the Takkaze River.

Late today a column of light infantry from the main forces which occupied Makale reported it had taken Donghea Pass. This pass commands the approach to Selicot, 15 miles along the 40-mile route to Amba Alaji. Amba Alaji is expected to be the next objective of the Fascist penetration toward Addis Ababa.

Other control units had taken up positions along the heights of Enda Selassie.

The forward patrols reported that bands of Shoan (Ethiopian provincial) warriors, who had been at Makale for a time, had vanished to the south and into the Tembien Mountains near Makale.

In these mountains, the Italians believed, the crafty Ras Syyoum, Ethiopian governor of the Tigre Province, is hiding. Airplane scouts reported sighting bands of Ethiopians in the vicinity of Bet Maryam, south of Makale.

Gugsa Receives Clergy.

Festivity reigned in Makale as Ras Gugsa received the clergy and civilian notables at his regained palace. He has been named governor of all Tigre Province by the Italians.

(The Exchange Telegraph Agency's correspondent with the Italian northern armies reported that last night Ethiopian troops dragged Gugsa's male and female relatives from their beds and marched them southward, with knives at their backs, as hostages.)

Italian Caribinieri began to patrol the city's streets, sauntering along in pairs, just as they do back in Italy.

Merchants, encouraged by their presence, as well as by the silhouetted figures of Bersaglieri sentries, resumed business as usual.

Among those who came to pay homage to the Italian commanders and to Gugsa was the Aleca of Makale, ranking priest of the city. He ordered special services to celebrate Makale's "deliverance."

School Principal Confesses Slaying

Held on Murder Charge for Shooting Head of Board.

Troy, N. Y., Nov. 8.—District Attorney Charles J. Ranney announced today that John E. Healey, jr., 60-year-old suspended school principal, had confessed the slaying of William F. Seber, 63, bank president and head of the Troy Board of Education.

"After a brief questioning, Healey admitted firing the shot," the district attorney said. Ranney did not immediately make known the details.

Healey was arraigned before Police Justice James F. Byron on a first-degree murder charge and committed to Rensselaer County Jail without bail.

7 months to 4 years, simply kept on with their yelling and pecking on any typewriters within reach.

Transients Disappointed.

Some reassurance, but not so much, was given the delegates who appealed for aid to families cut off from transient bureau relief and war veterans who are not eligible for CCC camps or, if eligible, are still prevented fro menrolling by various technicalities.

Haworth, assistant to Commissioner Allen, who was ill yesterday, told them that those sufferers who have been receiving transient relief until this week will get direct relief until November 15, after which time they will be in line for employment on WPA projects. Along with William C. Cleary, Assistant Deputy WPA Administrator for the District, Haworth received the petitioners' three-man committee in the District Building.

As for those veterans and family heads who have not been on transient rolls, Cleary and Haworth were at a loss to give their spokesmen any encouragement.

"But I do know," said Haworth, "that none will be forced to starve, whether they have been receiving relief up to now or not."

Fail to See Hopkins.

Jacob Baker, assistant administrator for WPA and FERA, met the transients first. Six o ftheir leaders went to Hopkins' office while about 100 of the rank and file waited in the street below under the surveillance of uniformed policemen and members of the crime prevention bureau.

Hopkins delegated to Baker the task of listening to the complaints. The seven men pulled up chairs and began to talk.

"Some of us were working in the warehouse, then we got fired and our jobs were taken by city prisoners," said Harry Smith, who identified himself as chairman of the Unemployed League.

"The veterans among us can't get into the temporary homes supposedly maintained for us," complained Harry P. Mullen.

"Should prisoners receive more consideration than people in need of relief?" queried Taylor Simmons.

After these committeemen, also Joseph Murray, Orrin Burr and Charles Donahey, had presented their case, Baker said he would telephone Commissioner Allen, who is WPA administrator for the District, to find out what could be done. But Allen was home with a cold. So three of the six complainants—Smith, Mullen and Donahey—went to the District Building and saw Cleary and Haworth.

Between You and Me

Permanent Aspects of Unemployment; Danger in Political Usage; Chance for Roosevelt.

By Raymond Clapper

SINCE we are so far from having solved the emergency problem of unemployment relief, perhaps it is premature to be thinking about the permanent aspects of the matter.

Yet the question is so vital in its bearing upon current handling of the situation that it is deserving of more attention than has been given to it. If unemployment is a temporary burden which will disappear with resumption of normal business activity, then it is not so important how we muddle through until that happy day arrives. If everyone is going to be back at work in a comparatively short time, then perhaps we can afford to be over-generous and can improvise from week to week in tiding over the unemployed until private industry offers them jobs.

On the other hand, if there are to be 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 unemployed with us always, even in times of thriving prosperity, then the problem would appear to be something else again. Would we want to go on boondoggling forever?

Harry Hopkins estimates that work relief costs in money about twice what straight dole would cost. He believes the double cost is worth the price because of the saving of morale. Grant that this will do for the moment. But should the Federal Government be committed permanently to providing work and makeup kits for unemployed actors? And can it go on indefinitely compiling old records of the Staten Island Zoo? It seems obvious that the sooner we can determine what the probabilities are with regard to unemployment in normal times, the sooner we can begin to shape our policy, either toward permanent handling of a large unemployment roll or toward the withdrawal entirely from Federal relief.

Little has been done toward ascertaining what the employment situation will be in normal times. The two Federal officials who should have the best ideas on that point are the Federal Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins, and the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins.

Yet it appears that so far as their ideas have developed, they have opposite answers. Mr. Hopkins believes it is probable that even with 1929 prosperity, we would have 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 idle walking the streets. He says there were 2,500,000 idle at the peak. Progress in mechanization and efficiency are such that he believes the surplus labor, for corresponding production, would be more than twice as great as in 1929.

Miss Perkins, on the other hand, takes a less pessimistic view. She believes that as an offset to increased productivity of the average worker, there are numerous new trades and service activities developing which can be counted upon to absorb much, if not all of the labor surplus.

With all of the planners, statisticians, investigators, and lookers-ahead now on the Government pay roll, or on boondoggling jobs, there would seem to be talent available already to undertake some foundation surveying on this vital matter.

One vicious danger is the political use that can be made of such a works program as we now have. Work relief is being handled in various States by political appointees, sponsored by political bosses of the respective States. Harry Hopkins has resisted political encroachment probably as much as any man could. Nobody could keep politics out of the dispensing of $4,800,000,000 while throwing up a hastily improvised spending organization.

But neither Hopkins nor anybody else can keep politics out of such an operation. It is leaving too much dynamite around for small boys to play with.

If there is to be permanent Federal relief, the dispensing organization will have to be taken much further away from the patronage trough than it has been so far. That will be difficult, for the temptation to use the fat works allotments for political purposes is almost too strong for human nature to resist.

Mr. Roosevelt has been notoriously weak on administration. One of the things he could do to redeem this weakness of his Administration would be to undertake a real study of the future of unemployment, attempt to assess the probabilities in the light of what has happened during the present period of improved industrial activity, and if it appears there is to be a continued necessity for sustaining a mass of unemployed persons, then formulate a policy that will stand up longer than 24 hours.

For whatever it means, Hoover friends in California are giving Nation-wide distribution to a pamphlet entitled "Hoover and Roosevelt—a Contrast in Policies." The material is reprinted from the Los Angeles Times with this explanation: "Hoover lived up to his oath of office, and to the platform of his party. Roosevelt has not."

The booklet begins with the statement that "economists the world over now agree that the world-wide depression was defeated in June-July, 1932, by the Hoover Administration."

That's news!

Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, the most active candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, is back in Washington, pausing between speaking engagements. He wants two things made clear:

1. He is a candidate for president, not for vice-president as some have said.

2. He says the recent election result in New York State is no laughing matter for the Republicans. It showed, Mr. Fish is certain, that New York State will be more difficult for the Republicans to carry than any State in the Middle West or North of the Mason and Dixon line, and that the Republicans must carry New York to win in 1936.

You will have to draw your own inference but is it possible that Mr. Fish is hinting that he is the man to take New York State away from Roosevelt and save the country?

A late afternoon newspaper came out with the headline, "Roosevelt Trailing 32-2," which at first glance indicated that the Republicans had at last smashed the New Deal. But it proved to be something about a high school football game.

Cumberland Unit Urges 2% Retail Sales Levy

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 8.—The Mercantile Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce has voted in favor of a 2 per cent retail sales tax, to be paid by the consumer, instead of the reenactment of the present 1 per cent gross sales tax.

The action came after a communication from the Maryland League of Retail Merchants was read by Benjamin Kamons, president of the local chamber, who said the league has requested the local bureau to support the lobby for the 2 per cent tax plan at the proposed special session of Maryland Legislature, if it is found necessary to raise additional relief funds.

SEC Threatens Ban nn Stock Of Non-Filers

Register by Dec. 1 or Be Outlawed, Landis Warns Utilities.

Consequences of failure to register, he said, flow not from any commission action but from the law itself. He pointed out that the act provides that if a company does not register by December 1, any use of the mails to take any step in the performance of its services, any offering for sale of securities, any use of the mails to acquire assets, or any business in interstate commerce automatically become illegal.

Even though th ecompanies may consider the act unconstitutional, he pointed out, all of these transactions will be of doubtful legality and companies will have difficulty in entering into any business agreements because of this stigma of illegality. He said that, although penalties may run as high as a fine of $200,000, the civil consequences of failure to register, rather than possible criminal penalties, will prove the most serious obstacles.

"How many securities can they sell; how many acquisitions of properties can be completed; how many mergers negotiated; how many contracts can be entered into?" he asked.

Waving a copy of the holding company registration blank in his hand, Landis declared that it was the "simplest path to safety" for the companies.

"This is a small document that can be filled in 20 minutes," he said. "By filing this registration no company waives any legal or constitutional rights. It still has the same right to contest. This registration constitutes merely a census of holding companies.

"If you were a stockholder of such a company, wouldn't you want to know what it intends to do? A company can go ahead with safety if it signs a registration statement. If it fails to do so thre legality of its acts is in doubt."

Concerning future legal action, Landis said that he saw two possibilities, either a suit to enjoin the commission from enforcing the law, or an action by the commission to bring about enforcement. He said there was some question in his mind as to whether a company could enjoin the commission because he said it would have difficulty in proving that it had been damaged materially merely by registering with the commission. He added that such a suit, if successful, brought by one company, would be no barrier against enforcing the law against other companies.

Sees Two Courses Open.

"Two courses of action are open to companies," he said. "The first is the simple act of registration. The second is failure to register so that in the course of actovities essential to the orderly business of the company neither thes tockholders nor the public will know where they stand.

"The Baltimore decision does not affect us. It isn't our problem. The problem rests with the utilities."

Landis said failure to register would outlaw all securities issued after December 1, but that it would not affect any issues before that date. He said there is no question that companies are rushing new security issues so that they can be dated before December 1.

Meanwhile, utility shares on the New York Stock Exchange continued to soar as a result of the Baltimore decision. President Roosevelt withheld comment on it, explaining that he had read nothing more than the headlines.

Rev. G. H. Seiber Elected by Synod

Lutherans Will Meet in '36 at Brunswick.

By the Associated Press.

Emmitsburg, Md., Nov. 8.—The Rev. George H. Seiber, Jefferson, Md., was elected president of the annual conference of the Maryland Synod of the United Lutheran Church for Frederick and Carroll counties at the annual meeting here yesterday. The 1936 meeting will be held at Brunswick.

Other new officers are the Rev. M. L. Kroh, Uniontown, secretary, and the Rev. H. C. Kraft, Myerville, treasurer.

Speakers included Dr. W. W. Davis, Baltimore, chairman of the Lord's Day Alliance committee; the Rev. A. G. Null, Debbs; Dr. A. J. Traver, Frederick; the Rev. C. H. Corbett, Thurmont, and Dr. W. G. Waltemyer, professor of history at Gettysburg College.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 8.—Under auspices of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, former Gov. A. O. Eberhart, of Minnesota, spoke tonight in the auditorium of the City Hall on "Dollars and Sense of the National Housing Act."

Police Radio Rejected.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 8.—The Hagerstown police department will have to get along without a radio call system for a while. Despite recommendations of the department to the board of street commissioners, the city council held the police department budget would not stand the $3,000 additional at this time. The police department recently went on an eight-hour basis and does most of its policing in automobiles.

hurried conference and decided to attend the mass meeting.

The march to South Campus started. The student soldiers followed. The peace marchers were heckled and booed.

Earlier in the morning, while painters were busy completing placards in Miner Hall, a few uniformed students entered and, according to reports, attempted to stop the work. Heated words were passed and the opposing groups nearly came to blows.

And later, as the column moved toward its meeting place, the signs were hoisted by willing hands. Someone in the line of march carried a banner, painted in red letters and reading: "Defend Ethiopia."

Banner Is Destroyed.

Hardly had he begun to march when the placard was ripped from his hands and torn in half. Both sides denied responsibility for either the banner of its destruction.

The rally opened with two verses of "America." And then speeches followed. The R. O. T. C. boys gathered nearby and kept up a constant heckling. Repeatedly, they were warned by members of the peace factions to "keep quiet or leave."

Margaret Stevenson, American University student, spoke first. She told of the meeting at her own university and urged Howard to back "every move for peace."

G. W. U. Criticised.

William Goodykoontz, of George Washington University, condemned the college administration for refusing to permit a like demonstration at his school. "They talk freedom of this and that, but they won't let us organize," he shouted.

Pearl Walker, of Howard; Walter Ellis, a member of the National Student League, and Lionel Florant, of the Howard Liberal Club, also spoke.

The meeting adopted three resolutions. One called for a national student peace conference. Another urged that R. O. T. C. training be made optional in all colleges. The third denounced Nazi government and requested the United States to send no delegation to the next Olympic games.

As the meeting adjourned, the students milled together and only the intervention of a professor stopped threatened conflict. A member of the peace group was heard to ask an R. O. T. C. officer if he would go to war for his country.

"Do you think I want to get shot?" he answered. "Why I get paid for wearing this uniform and—and anyway, it looks good."

Other Rally Peaceful.

The meeting at American University was attended by less than 100. Mary Lesta, attractive brunette, acted as chairman. Greetings from Howard were extended by Evelyn Johnson. A few of the speakers at Howard hurried to American University in time to address the indoor rally. It lasted but a few minutes, starting at 12:30 p. m. and ending with the first afternoon bell for classes.

Demonstration in other sections of the country, although peaceful, were attended by large throngs. In New York, 2,500 students gathered at City College. They thunderously pledged support of peace and agreed not to "fight for my country in any war."

Dr. Frederick B. Robinson, college president, was booed when he attacked the pledge as "unconstitutional and illegal."

Big Boston Meeting.

Anti-war cries rang out on staid Boston Common as men and women students from colleges throughout the city crowded and shoved to hear half a dozen speakers.

old fort and palace and immediately planned their next advance. It generally was agreed this will be to Amba, Alaji, for practical as well as sentimental reasons. This was the southernmost point of penetration of the Italian invasion of 1895 and 1896 and it was at Amba, Alaji, that an Italian army of 2,000, most of them natives, was slaughtered by Ethiopians in the last month of 1895, preceding by a short time the crowning defeat at Aduwa.

But lines of communication will be perfected and the Makale position consolidated before the next big push begins.

Strategists agreed a real battle is much more likely at Amba, Alaji, than at any point so far. Lying in a windswept mountain pass nearly 10,000 feet high, it has every natural advantage for defenders.

Center of Salt Market.

Between Amba, Alaji, and Makale but one important town—Selicot—lies on the high plateau. It is a rich community, surrounded by fertile fields and numerous streams.

Amba, Alaji, itself is the site of Ethiopia's most important salt market. A single trail is its only approach from the north.

To Gugsa, deserting son-in-law of Emperor Haile Selassie, went the honor of being the first to enter Makale.

With his warriors he strutted into the town as the populace cheered, and went at once to the palace of King John, his regal ancestor, to establish himself as Ras of all the province and proclaim Makale its capital. A composite brigade of infantry then took over the city.

At the same time Gen. Ruggiero Santini's Black Shirts seized Dolo, a few miles to the east, and the "mystery column" of Danakils shortly after dawn entered the town of Azbi, holding a strategic left flank position to protect the main advance.

Other troops at once entrenched themselves in positions south of Makale, overlooking a small market settlement.

Outposts also were established along the Gabat River, a few miles beyond Makale to the south.

That will form the line of the main bodies of troops while advance units of native troops clear the whole region and engineers build roads.

A dozen war planes, commanded by Count Galleazzo Ciano, son-in-law of Il Duce, droned over the hollow square formed by occupying troops as the Italian flag was hoisted over the fortress of Makale in the presence of Gen. Alessandro Pirzio-Biroli.

Two Fliers Feared Killed by Sharks engine and equipped with controllable pitch propellor. It succeeded the noted tri-motor Southern Cross, the ship in which he gained his greatest fame.

Ocean lines, tramp steamers and government and private planes, advised of Kingsford-Smith's plight by radio, sped to the vicinity where his plane was seen by Melrose, who abandoned his flight to join the search.

All ships in the Bay of Bengal and along the Malayan coast were asked to look for the fliers. Repeated radio signals to the Lady Southern Cross brought no reply, increasing fears the fliers were forced into the sea and had been killed by sharks which infest these waters.

But Kingsford-Smith's friends refused to give up hope, citing his previous narrow escapes. He was given up for dead six years ago when he, Charles Ulm and two other daredevils attempted to set a record flying from England to Australia. They were forced down in a blinding storm on the northeast coast of Australia, one of the most desolate regions in the world, inhabited by cannibals.

They were given up for dead after 12 days of search, but finally were sighted by a rescue plane and brought back to civilization.

Oakland-Brisbane Hop.

It was shortly after the armistice when Kingsford-Smith and Ulm, another former member of the Royal Air Force, conceived a flying feat never before attempted — a three-stop flight from Oakland, Calif., to Brisbane, Australia, 7,300 miles away. They made it safely.

The taste for danger which Kingsford-Smith apparently acquired during the war kept him adventuring almost constantly through the 17 years since the armistice.

England knighted the homely Australian with the infectious grin for his exploits and made him an air commodore.

He was the first man to fly the Tasman Sea. He set and reset world records between England and Australia and circumnavigated the globe in an epic flight which took two years and covered 80,000 miles.

dependent's announcement at Salt Lake City that he would not seek a fifth term because of age was termed "a serious blow to Progressivism" by Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, the Senate's "baby member."

"Senator Holt will certainly be missed in the United States Senate," Holt said. "He is one of the greatest men that ever came to that body. The power fight is going on, if we can keep it alive. I will follow it up as best I can, although it will be a small imitation of what Norris could do."

Another Democrat, Senator Black of Alabama, said:

"I hope he'll change his mind, but I've talked to him about it and I'm afraid he's determined to retire.

"Senator Norris is one of the great men of the country and certainly of the Senate. He is a man of rugged honesty. He fights for what he wants. The country needs him."

None of the Republican Independent group, of which Norris was dean, was in the city to comment. It is safe to say they will continue to advise him to run again, despite his final confirmation of long-circulated retirement rumors.

Immediately thereafter Electric Bond & Share opened 35,000 shares.

Tickers were jammed. Quotations were abbreviated. But by the end of the first hour this excitement had died down and profit-taking made inroads.

Sears Roebuck and Co. declared a 50 cent extra dividend and a regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share—compared with a 75 cent special in May, which was the first payment since 1932—and buying started into hte industrials which overcome profit-taking and brought the higher close.

Bond trading showed similar activity, particularly in utilities, with one opening block of $50,000 on the Stock Exchange and another block of $100,000 on the Curb Exchange bond market. Bond prices lost most of the gains near the close.

of the Tayloe family since Colonial days until recent years.

"This is all too bad," the friend said. "All this publicity is very unfortunate. It is all too bad; it is all too unfortunate; it is really sad."

Prince Mike could not be reached for a column. He was out of the county, it seemed, and no one knew when or if he'd be back.

As soon as the discovery news flashed around town, those who "knew it all the time" started adding angles. The station agent said a New York woman, passenger on a train, had espied Mike in all his radiance and had immediately said then that that was Prince Mike.

Somehow it all seems too true to be good. But then if it were good—would it be Mike?

Harry Gerguson, otherwise known as Prince Mike, passed through Washington with all the ebullience of a Yellowstone geyser last August 8, destination unknown. It was recalled here last night that for a while he had held a caretaker's job on a Long Island estate. But one quotation that he spread before reporters here last August seemed to be the appropriate commentary. He said then:

"Beethoven and I have one thing in common. We like chaos."

Hagerstown Acts to Cut Fire Insurance Costs

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 8.—Action of the mayor and council in meeting requirements of the board of fire underwriters will result in immediate reduction of the city's fire insurance deficiency charge from 15 to 13 cents.

The water department was ordered to carry out the requirements, which include inspection of water works valves and fire hydrants, flushing of hydrants at regular intervals, provision proper amount of fire hose, the presence of an employe of water department at all fires to give information as to location of valves and size of pipes, maintenance of card system record of location of all valves and hydrants and repairs, and map showing location of equipment and strict enforcement of the building code.

About $25,000,000 in property is affected by the reduction.

Railroad Seeks To Obtain Line ToSeatPleasant

East Washington Co. Files Application With Federal Unit.

The East Washington Railway Co. yesterday set out data in a statement filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission in support of its application for acquisition of a 2.9-mile rail line of the Chesapeake Beach Railway Co. from Seat Pleasant, Md., to Chesapeake Junction, in the District.

Both switching and freight revenues of the line will increase during the next five years, the statement estimated.

"Switching revenue for the 12-months-period, November 1, 1934, to November 1, 1935, aggregated $23,092.98 and freight revenue for the same period was $5,345.26," the application asserted.

During the next five years, it was estimated, switching revenue will show an average annual increase of 10 per cent.

Culbertson on Bridge

Unwarranted Conceit.

It is a common experience for a fine bridge player, coupled with a mediocre partner, to curse himself for accepting at face value and in their proper implication leads or plays that have no meaning whatsoever. The expert does not expect—does not even hope for—true skill from his partner, but he does feel, legitimately, that he is entitled to an elementary sort of cooperation. Thus, when his partner leads an eight spot against a three no trump contract, and he can account for, under the "rule of eleven," five higher cards in his own hand and dummy, marking the lead as "phony," not fourth best, he is apt to be more than a little aggrieved when it develops later (too late) that the lead was from A 10 8 6 3.

This sort of thing is traceable directly to the root of a great deal of evil—conceit. The beginner would not perpetrate this outrage, nor a player who knew himself to be just "fair." It is exactly the type of "fancy business" persisted in by players whose opinions of their own bridge skill are far from justified by fact. They have seen acknowledged experts effect various types of "swindles" by unorthodox plays, and they would rather die than admit to themselves that they are not capable of the same thing. They are like indifferent swimmers going far beyond their depth because their best girl is watching. In bridge games, life guards are conspicuously absent.

A Swindle.

It is rank cowardice for a player to accept defeat of one trick on an undoubled, unvulnerable contract when he has at his disposal a play that will either make the contract or set him two or three tricks. The extra 50 or 100 points are negligible compared to the possible reward.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1 ♠	Pass	4 ♠ (final bid)

Opening lead, diamond king by West.

South saw at a glance that he would have quite a job on his hands to avoid the loss of four tricks—two clubs and two diamonds. A successful heart finesse—unless, by a miracle, the king were to drop on an early round—would afford him only one discard in the dummy, and this could do no good.

His one chance was a "swindle." He drew no trumps, not wishing to give the defenders a chance to signal in other suits if either one "failed" in trumps. Instead, he promptly led the deuce of hearts up to dummy's singleton jack.

West was caught napping. He could not tell how many club and diamond tricks his side could take, and probably figured that his partner's one entry (for a lead-through in clubs) was the heart ace.

After this the hand was a laydown. After two rounds of spades South led the heart ace, discarding a club from dummy. He followed with the heart queen, ruffed West's king, returned to his hand with a trump, and discarded another club on his ten of hearts, after which he conceded two diamonds and one club.

Today's Question.

Question: If your partner makes a take-out double of an opponent's one no trump bid, what must you have to pass for penalties?

Answer: Ordinarily, you should pass for penalties if you have about 1½ honor tricks. You should take out the double, however, even if you hold 1½ honor tricks, if your entire strength is in one long suit. For example, pass the double with an ace in one suit and a king in another, but take out in a suit if you have a suit such as K Q J x x x and nothing else.

Holy Land Is Topic.

Taking as his subject "The Holy Land as Seen Today," the Rev. J. O. Knott, who made his tenth visit to Palestine and Egypt a few months ago, will address the Young People's Society of St. Paul's M. E. Church, Thirteenth and Crittenden streets northwest, tomorrow at 7:15 p. m.

Baby Discovered Dead, Suffocation Blamed

Apparently smothered to death, Ivy Ellen Gregg, 4-month-old daughter of Mrs. Dorothy Gregg, 400 block of Second street southeast, was found in her crib shortly before noon yesterday.

The grief-stricken mother rushed the babe to Providence Hospital, where physicians pronounced her dead. Mrs. Gregg said she found the child awake early yesterday, but when she returned, shortly after 11 a. m., she found the infant lifeless.

Educator to Talk.

Dr. Eugene A. Clark, president of Miner Teachers' College, will be guest speaker of the Civic National Forum at the Whitelaw Hotel at 4 p. m. tomorrow. His subject will be "The New Education." The Aeolian String Club will play.

Funeral Rites Today For Mrs. Effie Deane

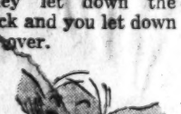
WHAT IS A JAQUET TREATMENT?

You sink back into a chair like this.

They let down the back and you let down all over.



Soft lights, smooth creams, gentle fingers, and you sleep.

Maybe you have crow's feet?

Or deep frowns?

A double chin?

Or large pores?

Do they rub your back? Down to here!

You're chinned and hung up to dry.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Through the inscrutable vagaries of the New York booking offices, one of the new season's "first times on any stage," which there once was a possibility of Washington's enjoying, goes to Wilmington, Del., instead.

On Saturday night in Wilmington, Sam H. Harris will offer the premiere performance of his new play of "The First Lady," preliminary to a Monday night opening and fortnight's engagement in Philadelphia.

"The First Lady," I am informed by one in close touch with its preparation, promises to be an interesting and amusing comedy-drama notable for the unusual number of important feminine roles it affords—eight in all unless someone has miscounted.

Two of the foremost of these will be played by Jane Cowl and Lily Cahill, both of whom were seen at the National last season in "Rain from Heaven," with John Halliday, Jose Ruben and numerous others of distinction.

Liked Capital Premiere.

Since Sam H. Harris and Max Gordon are virtually partners in the management of certain Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer funds this season, they attend each others openings. So Mr. Harris was in the National Capital to attend the premiere of his associate's production of Mrs. Helen Jerome's dramatic version of Jane Austen's crisply humorous novel of "Pride and Prejudice."

It will be recalled by all those who attended it that the "Pride and Prejudice" opening was one of Washington's brilliant evenings in the theater. The house was full to capacity and the gently mannered audience reveled in the quaint delight of a costume play of the first rank, expressing its enthusiasm in no uncertain terms upon the fall of the final curtain.

The occasion was one to warm the heart of any showman, and Mr. Harris is a showman.

Immediately he began to sound out Manager Stephen E. Cochran of the National upon the important item of future bookings. What was there in sight for the week of November 18? And the week of November 25, if it wasn't too much trouble?

Quite definitely he conveyed the impression that the National was a coveted spot for the introduction to the public of his own new one, "The First Lady."

So it Ended There.

And that is apparently as far as it ever went, in so far as the premiere week is concerned. Perhaps "The First Lady," perfected by its fortnight or so of out-of-town playing, will come along a little later, but still in advance of its New York opening.

I say "perhaps." There is no assurance of it, either from Mr. Harris or from Mr. Cochran, although at least one of them, I am sure, is hoping that something of the kind may come about.

It would be a pleasant week in Washington if "The First Lady" should come here, because Miss Cahill has a sister and Miss Cowl a friend resident in the Capital who sees to it that their visiting weeks are made socially delightful.

Then, too, there is the matter of the play itself. It is said to concern the adventures and misadventures of two alert and heady young women, each of whom understakes to put her husband in the White House. It is being bruited about, more or less sotto voce, that some of the characters in the piece are modeled after well-known personages who really make their homes in this city.

That might turn out to be interesting and "socially delightful," also.

Reverting momentarily to "Pride and Prejudice," which its producer Max Gordon told this column he liked better than any play he ever had put on, and which the local reviewers unanimously declared a hit, it opened in the Music Box Theater in New York on Tuesday night and received the same sort of unanimous acclaim from the Broadway Death Watch as it inspired here.

It is evident from the written reports of the Broadway opening that the minor defects observed here on its first night all had been expunged during the Philadelphia engagement, exactly as Mr. Gordon was sure they would be.

In his warmly commendatory remarks concerning "Pride and Prejudice," the amiable Percy Hammond, of the New York Herald Tribune, had this to say: "I am one who would not suspect Mr. Max Gordon of enthusiastic reverence for the works of Jane Austen, but in casting and setting the play at the Music Box he is almost fanatical . . . This particular reviewer went Tuesday night expecting to be bored and remained to be interested."

And this from the scholarly Brooks Atkinson, in the New York Times: "This dramatization is full of salty lines and is charmingly populated with spirited performers who know how to lard conversation with gleaming malice . . . After a nicely caustic evening in the theater, this reviewer has no regrets."

And on top of all this comes a cordial note on the Max Gordon letterhead thanking this department for whatever part it may have played in launching "Pride and Prejudice" on its way toward Tuesday evening's New York triumph. Thoughtful, I'd say.

Is Opera's Defaulting "Angel"

Postlude . . . . By Ray C. B. Brown

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

National Symphony Orchestra, Hans Kindler, conductor; Constitution Hall. American debut of Roman Totenberg, violinist. Program: Overture to "Les Petits Riens" (Mozart), violin concerto in D major (Beethoven), "En Saga" (Sibelius), "Dance of Persian Slave Girls" from "Khovanstchina" (Musorgski).

Returning the compliment that Roman Totenberg paid to the National Capital by choosing to make his American debut here rather than on the Island of Manhattan where first appearances flourish, last night's audience extended a rousing welcome to the young Polish violinist. The demonstration which followed his performance of the Beethoven concerto, recalling him a half dozen times to the stage, was a happy augury for his cordial reception by music lovers elsewhere.

The enthusiasm was fully justified by the artistic talent which the visitor displayed, a talent of fine musicianly fiber, technical expertise, and poetic quality. Mr. Totenberg's tone is eloquently persuasive and endued with suavity, his clear phrasing bespeaks a keen sense of significant accent, and he has a well controlled temperamental fire. His playing is pervaded with a continuous glow, a steady radiance of timbre which indicates his emotional identity with the music he is disclosing.

In his reading of the concerto, he met with admirable competence the test which this great work places upon technique and intepretation. Other concertos may put greater strain upon virtuosity, but this masterpiece demands for its adequate peformance intellectual and spiritual reserves. To cope successfully with its full implications, the musician must be not only a master of his instrument but also somewhat of a seer. Mr. Totenberg read it with intelligence, with warmth, and with conviction.

The few rasps and faults of intonation that came to one's ears one is inclined to lay not to the player's discredit but to the instrument he used. At those rare moments it sounded as though it were not completely in rapport with the player, as though it were not vibrating in every cell responsively as does the violin which has become an extension of the player's personality.

Mr. Totenberg's triumph was preceded on the program by the graceful little overture which Mozart wrote during that sojourn in Paris which ended with one of the great griefs of his life—his mother's death. In the spring of 1778 he had dreams of winning fame with an opera, but he was then innocent of the intriguing ways that lead to stage productions, and all he was able to secure in that line was a commission to write some ballet music for the choreographer, Jean Georges Noverre.

"Les Petits Riens" was put on at the Italian opera as a curtain-raiser for Puccini's opera, "Le Finte Gemelle," and Mozart got no credit for it, because he did not advertise his authorship out of deference to Noverre. After a short run, the ballet went into retirement, and the music is seldom heard in these latter days. One thanks Dr. Kindler for bringing the overture back for our delectation.

The stirring "En Saga" of Jean Sibelius was given a satisfyingly sturdy and strong performance. It is a tale of some ancient seafaring Vikings, a story of struggle with wind and waves and of battle on forlorn shores. In its measures are the mystery of the wide waters, the thrill of a landfall, the excitement of contest, and the mourning for the fallen.

In opposition to this saga of hte North was the closing selection from Musorgski's uncompleted opera, a highly orientalized dance brilliant with the orchestration of Rimski-Korsakov.

Citizens of Southbury, Conn., will tell all tonight when Walter Pitkin (Life Begins at Forty) will interview them during the "We Americans" program (WJSV at 8).

• • • •

Medleys of Modern Rhythms, by Frank Black's Orchestra, and the Cavaliers Quartet will be Uncle Sam's contribution to English listeners at 12:30 noon today on WRC. The international week-end program, known to the British audience as "Five Hours Back," is broadcast on both sides of the Atlantic.

• • • •

Lily Pons, interchanging broadcast dates for one week only with Nino Martini, will be heard with Andre Kastelanetz' Orchestra and Chorus (WJSV at 9).

• • • •

The Chicago Board of Trade American Legion Band, national championship winners, will be special guests at the Barn Dance (WMAL at 9:30). They will be heard in a pre-Armistice Day program.

• • • •

"Two Men Met at Veale," a new war play, and a talented array of guest stars and actors will be offered by Wallace Beery on his Shell Chateau program (WRC at 9:30). Howard Emmett Rogers is the author of the play, which Beery bought for exclusive radio presentation after seeing it at the Lambs Club in New York. Beery will play the lead, with Chester Morris, screen player, in a supporting role. Others on the bill include Harriet Hilliard, Helen Broderick, Lester Crawford and Babe (not Bebe) Daniels, noted screen cameramen, who will reveal some of the interesting tricks of his trade.

• • • •

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will speak from Washington in behalf of the Red Cross, Kate Smith will sing, and workers in the great relief organization will dramatize their experiences over the radio for the first time when the annual Red Cross Roll Call goes over the airwaves tonight (WJSV at 11). Miss Smith will sing, appropriately enough, "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?" and will then be inducted into the Canteen Corps of the Red Cross by Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman.

Capital Store Shows Varied Party Favors

Assortment of Novelties Will Simplify Plans for Thanksgiving.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IT'S no fun giving a party that runs you on to the red side of the ledger. And yet, how often that happens? Even the simplest little affairs have a way of mounting up until you're fairly dizzy watching the nickles and dimes escape.

One good way of keeping a party strictly within budget dimensions is to decide ahead of time just what scheme of decoration (if any) you are going to follow out, just what you'll need in the way of favors, tallies and what not. After you've decided, then choose a place for buying these where you know the prices are in line with your purse.

May we suggest for all those giving Thanksgiving parties a certain downtown store that has a fascinating display of all sorts of attractive party accessories? A large table is given over to things in the Thanksgiving spirit. Tally cards in delightful designs, chrysanthemum nut cups, and oh such a lot of things.

Quite out of the ordinary are the little crepe paper Pilgrim ladies with nut cups hidden beneath their crepe paper skirts. And then the tall Pilgrim hats that you can use for candy or nuts. To grace the center of the table there's an ornate crepe paper gobbler. And then, there are artificial autumn leaves, and corn shuck place markers. Even though you aren't party minded it's fun to see the variety of novelties here.

Flower Plant Holders.

With the vogue for indoor plants and greenery steadily growing you can transform a dull window or corner into a fascinating conservatory. A local store is showing an attractive assortment of flower plant holders. Some come in shining glass, ruby and emerald shades and others in brilliant pottery effects. Most of these are complete, with metal frames or stands. Handsome for prizes or gifts. Prices range from 50 cents to $1.

Handkerchief Sets.

VISITING uncles and aunts and cousins who'd like to give the namesake a little present but don't know what to choose have their problem solved for them by a local store. (Solved, that is, if the namesake is a lassie). Here they'll find on display the most adorable handkerchief sets.

There's a hanky for each day in the week with Sunday, Monday, etc., embroidered in the corner.

They're placed in a box to look as though they were hanging from a clothesline. The camouflage is complete even to the tiny clothespins, which hold them in place.

As the final touch to this amusing package there is a drawing pad and a colored crayon. The price? Only 50 cents.

Three Delightful Perfumes.

AN ETERNAL triangle of fragrance is the trio of delightful perfumes featured in a local store. The first is Blue Grass, a fresh, gayly exciting out-of-doors scent. The next l'Amour d'Elizabeth, a gentle perfume suggesting tender thoughts and stirring sweetness. The last, La Joie d'Elizabeth, a scent that is the incarnation of joy and the essence of youth.

No discriminating woman likes to run the risk of monotony by using the same perfume day in and day out. She turns naturally to fragrances, all equally fine, but strikingly different to emphasize her moods and change of costume. This perfume trio answers her every requirement.

Life Masks Hobby of 3 Business Men, Who Work at It After Office Hours

Miss Hope Hunt's profile lends itself charmingly to the work of "The Three Masketeers"—Messrs. Feurer, Flesch and Sharpe—who in their spare moments have originated and developed a new kind of art.

All Features of Person Reproduced Faithfully by Latest Methods.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

MIRRORS tell a woman many things, but neither her mirror nor a woman's best friend can tell her exactly how she looks; whether her nose turns up, is straight or crooked; how her ears are shaped, and how her head sets on her neck.

No woman, then, can be sure just how the years trace themselves upon her face. A photograph taken a decade ago might give a fair indication of her appearance the day "she had her picture made" and asked the photographer to make her pretty in the final print. So her portrait is probably better proof of the photographer's art at erasing tell-tale lines than of her actual appearance.

But Miss Hope Hunt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Hunt, of Washington, will never be in doubt as to her appearance the autumn of 1935. Having posed for a life mask executed by Richard A. Flesch, Herman Feurer and Norvelle W. Sharpe, she can know next year, or a quarter of a century from now, exactly how she looked her senior year in Western High School, when she was an honor roll student, a reporter on the school newspaper and an active participant in dramatics and glee club programs.

Artists After Work Hours.

The plaque of Miss Hunt's profile is only one of the many made by the Three Musketeers who are business men by day and artists pursuing an unusual hobby after regular working hours.

Their studio, the "Etude Plastique," is in the Washington Medical Building. Its green tinted walls are covered with a variety of casts—portraits, profiles, hands, feet and noses. Benches, plaster molds and tools are the chief furnishings of the studio, which is a workshop in the strictest sense.

Yesterday Mr. Sharpe told of how the Musketeers work and revealed a few facts about his associates, who developed a new method of making faithful, detailed ectypes of a person's face and figure.

He recalled that until a year ago life masks were generally made of ordinary casting plaster, but did not include reproductions of a person's hair, eyes or ears. "Today, however, we are turning out life masks that faithfully represent every feature, including hair, eye brows, lashes, moustache, curls or lips parted in laughter," he said.

Formula Is Their Secret.

Although he did not divulge the formula for the material used (this being a secret shared only by the three men) he explained the process in detail. It sounded simple enough.

"Individuals may have a cast made sitting or reclining," he said. "The material, scented with sandlewood, is applied with spatula. The hair comes first, application strokes going with the grain of the hair; ears, each protected with small wads of cotton inside, come next; then the neck and throat, and finally the mouth, eyes and nose. Twin sipping straws, glued together, are inserted in the subject's nostrils. Through these he breathes with complete ease and comfort during the 20 or 30 minutes while the mask is being made."

To keep dust and fingerprints off the portraits, Mr. Flesch sprays over the cast a thinned shellac, which gives a misty sheen to the finished product, Mr. Sharpe said. "The plaque has the greates feminine appeal because it suggests a cameo," he added. "The favorite combination is a slightly tinted head against a stunning blue background, resembling wedgwood.

'Masketeers' Have Varied Background of Training and Experience.

The Three Musketeers bring a varied background of training and experience to this work. A sculptor and painter, Mr. Flesch studied in the Dresden, Munich and Frankfort Academies of Fine Arts. Coming to this country in 1923, he later exhibited with the Independent Artists of New York and Washington. Today, his vocation is teaching sculpture to children at District playgrounds.

Nut Boutonnieres.

To add that individual touch to your fall suit try one of the new boutonnieres of nuts which the smarter shops are showing. The boutonnieres match the nut bracelets and clips designed for sportswear.

Sparkling Colors, Lots of Pleats Highlight Afternoon Dresses

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Festive as a cocktail, and a tonic to the wardrobe, are the new dresses sponsored by Fashion for afternoon gadding. Sparkling colors . . . lots of pleats . . . and tunic effects highlight them—and you—whether you're bridging or perched at your favorite cocktail bar.

Their sleeves are important, and go in for drapes, shorrs and pleats Sketched is a dress with pleats stitched down at the shoulders, then they're suddenly released and the fullness cascades to the wrist.

Fashion decrees high necklines for these afternoon dresses. Plain, snug necklines that show off clips and pins to perfection.

Belts of gold or silver kid swing into the faternoon dress picture, too. Sometimes they're plain and unadorned . . . sometimes they boast jeweled buckles, and glitter away in true medieval fashion.

Pleats aren't confined to sleeves by any means. Sometimes a skirt is pleated down the entire front . . . sometimes (as in the sketch) it's pleated all around, and swirls grandly on the dance floor. (Many of these afternoon dresses are plenty dressed-up enough to go tea-dancing!)

Fashion likes heavy sheers, and crepes with either plain or pebbly surfaces, and lots of metal shot fabrics. Frankly flippant bubble dots made of metal threads are strewn over the blouse of the tunic dress sketched — and give it quite a "come-on-let's-go" air.

Fashion splashes these dresses with all the colors of a painter's palette! There are Renaissance colors deep and rich and subtle . . . spirited reds and blues and greens and rusts . . . jewel colors sparkling as champagne. A heady array to choose from!

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WE DON'T ALWAYS practice what we preach. Theoretically we are all for agreeing in a gentle voice with the man of the house. But we must break down and confess that we resort, the same as other ladies, to strong language, wild gestures, and if worst comes to worst, a few tears, to win him over to our notion about where the new chair should be placed or the color of the dining room curtains.

• • • •

R. H. WRITES: What would you do with a man who is dead-set on blue for a new chair when I just know it would look terrible in the room we have? And what would you have for this chair and sofa and for new draperies? The room has the usual ivory walls, ivory curtains and a plain green rug. We have two chairs in rust and lamps with green pottery bases and parchment shades—all of wihch must remain. The room seems rather dead to me and I'd like to give it sparkle with the new things . . . hence my aversion to the idea of a blue chair which doesn't seem to me to have enough dash.

• • • •

ANSWER: Well, you might select a more unusual interesting shade of blue than he really has in mind—that would give life to the room. Or you might let him have his blue, then counteract it with other tones in the sofa and draperies. In fact, blue could be used so it looks very well indeed with the things you have—it certainly wouldn't clash. For the sofa, I think I'd have a vibrant yellow flowered material, then use the same thing for draperies. Get a pattern harmonious with the colors you have but with a lot of life to it. (Our king cure-all for a drab room is something brilliantly flowered!)

Reader Finds "Friend's" Letter "Very Interesting" and Offers Comment.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have been reading your column for some time and tremendously admire your thought and understanding. Today (November 1) I read the very interesting letter from "Friend." Of course, as you indicated, you did not give the public the whole of the letter to read, but from what was printed it seems to me that "Friend" is quite justified in wondering about and investigating her so-called friend's attitude.

• • • •

Friendship, based on love and respect, and sustained by even ordinary courtesy, does not permit such an attitude to flourish, in a manner so tactlessly and flagrantly unconcealed. Particularly not when it goes on continuously, as "Friend's" letter seemed to indicate.

• • • •

There is a type of person who will "use" another in order to appear clever, and it seems to me the individual described in "Friend's" letter is that type of person, and wholly underserving of "Friend's" companionship. Sometimes, as you know, we put our trust in the wrong persons until we actually see them turning upon and rending us. A real friendship between two persons precludes one's making a doormat of the other. I would appreciate your comment or reply to this. Sincerely, A. F.

• • • •

Confusion of Terms.

DEAR A. F.: If you are a daily reader of this column you must know from reading the reply given Monday, November 4, to "All-Of-Us," my reasons for answering "Friend" as I did.

As you suggest, and as all sensible minds must concede, friendship is based on a mutual feeling of love and respect and sustained not only by manifestations of ordinary courtesy to one's friend's face, but as well by consistent demonstrations of approving and protective loyalty in one's friend's absence. Where anything less exists the relationship is not deserving of the name of friendship. And to say "I have a friend who constantly betrays my trust" is to place in question one's ability to see clearly, think logically or speak accurately.

• • • •

One cannot deny, of course, that it has become common usage in the English language to describe nearly all associates and chance acquaintances as "friend," but it is a careless misnomer, nevertheless, and a term which should be applied with reluctance even to accepted intimates. The man or woman who has achieved half a dozen, or even one or two, genuine friendships in life is a rarely fortunate mortal.

• • • •

I should never advise anyone's wondering about, investigating, attempting to reform or even to make compromise with the conduct of any mature person who flagrantly and consistently proves himself undeserving of trust and esteem. I should say, rather, eschew his society, ignore him and forget him.

I suspect what this whole discussion boils down to is that we who have engaged in it do not use the same lauguage when speaking of the same thing. M. H.

Coats for Mrs. W.

NOTE TO MRS. W: At the moment of writing this, I have already received six telephone calls from as many women willing to provide a winter coat for the dependent invalid whose need you bespoke through this column. I'm sorry you did not give me your name, address, or telephone number. Won't you please supply this necessary information that I may dispose of the matter? M. H.

Fame in Field of Science Is Finally Won by Woman As Dr. Sabin Receives Award

By Malvina Lindsay.
Woman's Page Editor.

JUST AT A TIME when the lament is heard on every hand that there are no great women any more, the M. Carey Thomas $5,000 award for eminent achievement is bestowed on Dr. Florence Rena Sabin, noted anatomist. This is the third time the award has been made, first in 1922 to Dr. Thomas, president emeritus of Bryn Mawr, and second in 1931 to the late Jane Addams, who at the time of her death was regarded by many as "America's greatest woman."

• • • •

Just what constitutes a great woman may be a matter of debate. In the past she was usually a queen or a charmer. More recently the idea that prevailed that she must be either a passionate evangel of some cause or a Lady Bountiful. Seldom have the lists of the feminine great leaned very heavily toward women intellectuals and scientists. That is why the award to Dr. Sabin is significant.

• • • •

The name of Dr. Sabin is not popularly nor sentimentally known because her service to humanity has been largely within the walls of the laboratory and the classroom. As a member of the Rockefeller Institute staff since 1925 and as a former professor of Histology at Johns Hopkins University, she has devoted herself to the study of blood and blood diseases with particular attention to research on tuberculosis. She was the first woman named to membership in the National Academy of Sciences and was the first woman member of the Rockefeller Institute staff.

IN ACCEPTING her award, Dr. Sabin paid tribute to the work of three European women "in opening up whole new fields of knowledge." Those she named were Mme. Curie, famed for her work with radium; Agnes Pockels, of Germany, noted for her discovery of "surface tension" which has developed a new branch of physical chemistry, and to Emmy Noether, famous mathematician who spent 18 months in the Bryn Mawr faculty before her death this year.

• • • •

With the exception of Mme. Curie, these women scientists are not widely known among members of their sex. Nor for that matter is the name of M. Carey Thomas exactly a household word. And yet Dr. Thomas perhaps has done more than any living educator to break down barriers of knowledge to women. As a red-haired, aming-spirited young college teacher, she began nearly 50 years ago preaching the gospel of "believe in women" and through succeeding years it was the text of her chapel sermons and the motif of her life.

Women educators and scientists have never received their due of recognition beside women philanthropists, humanitarians and reformers probably because they do not have much dramatic appeal and because their contribution is not concrete and immediate. Also the tradition has persisted that a woman's public service should be a matter of the heart rather than the head, that she should succor the diseased and the distressed rather than concern herself with the prevention of their plight.

AS A RESULT nearly every woman who aspires to achievement thinks of service to the world in terms of Christmas baskets and war bandages, in terms of missionary endeavor in behalf of the "right." In her groups she is all for half-baked action on the problems that confront the world rather than for study and analysis. Because she is mentally lazy, because she lacks the scientific attitude toward life, she makes her political, economic and social decisions on the basis of emotion rather than investigation and reason.

• • • •

No one will deny the need for the humanitarian and the reformer. No one will gainsay the greatness of Jane Addams, Susan B. Anthony, Florence Nightingale and other women who have sought both with zeal and intelligence to temper life's sufferings and injustices. But there is no reason why woman's achievement should be exclusively directed toward clearing up the messes of the world.

• • • •

Women as a class perhaps have little natural bent for science. Few can become Sabins or Curies. But all can cultivate the scientific attitude of mind that seeks first after knowledge and second after belief and opinion, that seeks the cause of what is wrong as zealously as the cure.

Allow Children A Few Minutes At Adult Party

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THERE ARE some houses where the children are banished when their elders are having company; others where they are not only present but pervasive, always under foot and very cramping to the style. Neither extreme is good.

Children who are not allowed to appear at all become shy and ill at ease in adult company, and as a result are apt to assume a rather contemptuous attitude toward grown-ups; those who are always in evidence are likely to become too fond of the limelight and tend to be self-assertive and "smart."

Few if any parents find it necessary or advisable to be continuously in the room while their children entertain their young friends. They will be wise to greet the guests as they arrive and to be within call during the party in case they are wanted.

The same course might be followed when the parents entertain. Let the children, specially dressed and groomed for the occasion, come into the room for a few minutes to greet the guests and perhaps exchange a few words of conversation.

These moments can be made something of an occasion, so that they are looked upon by the children as a privilege. There should be no correction of manners, no words of reproof. The youngsters must feel welcome, and at ease. If there are refreshments, the time of their serving is a good moment for the children's entrance. Then they too can have whatever seems good for them, and make their exit.

Poll Shows a Decided Stand Against Living With 'In-Laws'

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Children are the most appreciated factor in family life today, and modern parents are about two to one against "mixed" religious marriages for their children. Marriage to be a success need not depend upon financial security, but living with relatives or in-laws is overwhelmingly regarded as dangerous to happy and successful marriage.

These are a few of the major results shown by returns to date from five Eastern States in a nation-wide "fact" survey on the problem of marriage and the home now being conducted among married couples, by the Bernarr Macfadden Foundation.

The majority of answers received are from married couples of the laboring and white collar clerical class, including bank clerks, truckmen, mechanics, printers, factory workers, etc. A small minority are from professional fields.

Average Age of Marriage.

Returns show the average age at marriage is around 23 years for the man, and 19 for the woman. A husband most appreciates in his home life (1) children; (2) good meals; (3) attractive home; (4) a wife's social ability.

Only one of every two-and-a-half marriages is of the "mixed" religious type, the returns show, while it appears that parents are almost two to one against approving such marriages for their children. Other returns show an appreciable majority of families without savings accounts, while the proportion is exactly three to one favoring those having some form of life insurance. Average insurance policy noted per family in the five States is slightly in excess of $3,000.

Living With Relatives Opposed.

The survey further shows an even division of opinion on the question: "Has the depression affected your own married life as regards its happiness and success?" while a majority of approximately two-and-a-half to one approves of having a wife interest herself directly in her husband's business affairs.

As to the advisability of married couples living with relatives or in-laws, returns indicate by a majority of more than nine to one, that living under these conditions makes a happy and successful marriage difficult.

Parents' Fears On Retarded Talk Allayed

Children Have Learned to Speak Perfectly After Third Year.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

HOW proud father and mother are when Baby Joan says her words. But sounds are not necessarily words and must not be considered speech. They are noises, true enough, and some of them are undeniably loud and persistent. Although words may not be used, yet the meaning is clear, and the infant is announcing that she is hungry, cold, uncomfortable, or what not. A few words may come even before the first birthday. Da-da and ma-ma are syllables that are easily spoken.

By the end of the second year the child should be able to form sentences of two or three words. As soon as this grouping of words has been associated the child's vocabulary begins to grow and includes, first, the names of persons and of objects; then, the words of doing—verbs; and later, the qualifying words—adjectives and adverbs.

Parents' Worries Allayed.

Occasionally parents are very much worried because their children do not start to talk as early as others. However, delay even beyond the third year has been followed—in children of normal mentality—by the development of perfect speech.

If speech fails to develop because of deafness it is usually congenital—that is, the baby may have been born deaf. There are cases in which heavily impacted wax in the ear canal has led to the transmission of so little sound as to be practically tantamount to deafness. Again, disease may exert a pronounced influence. A child may have been talking, but following a severe illness, such as scarlet fever (with resulting deafness), speech may be lost. Certain children may show slight physical defects, and, although they start to talk, the effort will cease because of their failure to keep up with other children of the same age. Adenoids, harelip, cleft palate, an imperfect dental arch, jaw deformities, and a tied tongue all influence speech. Very few of these conditions are difficult to remedy, and in any delay in talking a careful physical examination should be made.

When Baby Talk Persists.

At times baby talk will persist long after it should have been abandoned. This may be a habit or it may be considered unusually cute, but, unfortunately, now and then it is a symptom of subnormal mentality.

Some children are thought to be mentally retarded when they are not so at all, simply because speech development has been slow. Perhaps the parents have not realized that sounds must be heard by the child over and over again in relation to the object or the wish. Only then is the attempt made to reproduce the sound.

Interesting Ideas on Vegetable and Meat Cookery Are Given in Today's Food Page

New Method of Cooking Roast Evolved for Modern Ovens

Trick of Rubbing Meat With Flour and Searing Unnecessary and Temperature Is the Real Secret of Success.

By Dorothea Duncan.

EVERY TIME the subject of roasting meat comes up there are those who raise their eyebrows at the new, radically different methods of cooking suggested today.

The woman who owns an up-to-the-minute range with a well insulated oven, heat control and thermometer is advised by home economists to discard her elaborate roasting pan, the trick of rubbing the meat with flour, the so-called time-worn method of searing, and even the addition of water to the pan.

We used to think that searing the meat was essential for sealing in the juices and making brown gravy. Searing will give roast an excellent color and the essence will be a rich brown, but scientists have discovered that the only meat that really needs searing to prevent the escape of juices is a tough cut or a very thin one that will lose most of its juice and therefore its flavor in a short period of cooking. They believe a tender cut can be roasted just as well at a moderate temperature throughout the cooking period and there will be no appreciable loss of juices.

Oven Roast Should Be Weighed.

Even more revolutionary is the idea that a roast need not be covered while cooking to make it tender. This, however, applies only to the cuts that are suitable for oven roasting, a leg, loin, or shoulder of lamb, the same cuts of veal, a loin, or fresh ham, or shoulder of pork, a rib or rump roast of beef. The meats generally spoken of as pot roasts need the steam produced under the lid by the juices to make them tender, for they are naturally tougher cuts.

The oven roast should be weighed so that you can accurately gage its cooking time, then place it, fat side up, in any shallow pan big enough to hold it. Add salt in the proportion of one teaspoon to 1 pound of meat and slip the pan into the oven. No cover, no water, no flour are used.

The roasting temperature is the real secret of success. Set the oven regulator at 300 degrees F. to 350 degrees F. for every kind of roast except fresh pork (350 degrees F. is best for pork), and don't change that temperature at any time during the roasting.

If you have never done a roast this way you will immediately say, but will it be brown? Will I have any drippings for gravy? Will it be juicy? It will be all of those things, if you have selected a good oven roast. A juicy, tender, brown roast is a bit of culinary perfection and this easy method achieves this result.

Time Required for Cooking.

Cook the following roasts at the above stated temperatures. Rib roast of beef (boned and rolled) will require 25-27 minutes of cooking per pound and will be medium rare. Fresh ham roast will be well done if cooked 30-32 minutes per pound. Lamb roast requires 30-35 minutes of cooking per pound to be well done. Veal roast will be well done after cooking 25 minutes per pound.

You will find that cooking meat at a constant temperature without first searing at a high temperature will make a great difference in the appearance of the stove, for there will be no spattering of hot grease over the inside surface.

The woman who has a well insulated oven with heat control and thermometer can well apply the new rules of meat cookery, for they have been worked out by home economists and scientists who adapt particular methods of cooking to the type of equipment used.

The woman, however, who is still using an oven that is poorly ventilated and insulated may not have so great a success with the revolutionary methods of meat cookery. Constant temperature, proper circulation of air currents, insulation, and moisture content of the air circulating in the oven are all important features in oven meat cookery. A poorly insulated oven, for example, may allow too much of the warm air to escape, which means that the moisture content of the air coming in contact with the meat is not sufficient to keep the meat moist. In this case it may be better to roast the meat covered or with the addition of a little water in the bottom of the pan.

All the modern rules for meat cookery then may not apply to your method, for many are devised to keep in step with improvements made in the gas or electric oven.

Stagger the Pans.

For evenness in baking, stagger the pans in alternate position on the racks instead of placing them directly over and under one another. Less gas is consumed when the pans are placed on alternate positions on the racks, and the oven air circulates better.

Fruit Cake Recipes Sought in New Contest

The fruit cake made in mid-November will be lusciously ripe for the holiday season. Although Christmas is seven weeks away, fruit cake is a timely subject and will be the topic of the current recipe contest.

Light or dark fruit cakes, unusual variations, a favorite recipe that has been in the family for generations, all will be eligible. Since this part of the country is famous for fruit cakes, a splendid variety of contributions is expected.

Five prizes of $1 each will be awarded and the winners will be included in the final judging for three grand prizes—a wooden salad bowl, a chromium cake tray with enamel cover, and a Dutch oven.

Recipes must reach The Post not later than next Saturday. Address Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post.

Pumpkin Pie's Newest Recipe

Gingersnap Crust Is Boon to Cooks Who Have Had Baking Luck.

LATEST TO enter the realm of unbaked pies is the pumpkin chiffon with gingersnap crust. This pie will be a boon to the woman who finds it impossible to make a tender flaky crust or a baked pie whose filling does not soak into the crust.

The crust is prepared by rolling enough gingersnaps to make 1½ cups of fine crumbs. These crumbs are mixed with 1 quarter pound stick (½ cup) of butter. The butter will work into the crumbs more readily if softened, but not melted.

Press the crust into a 9-inch pie tin with a silver spoon until it resembles an ordinary pie crust. Fill with the following pumpkin mixture.

Pumpkin Chiffon Filling.

1½ cups pumpkin
1 cup brown sugar
3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
½ cup milk
3 egg whites, beaten stiff
2 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons cinnamon
½ teaspoon each, ginger, allspice and salt
1 envelope gelatin, softened in ¼ cup cold water
1 tablespoon orange juice

Cook together in a double boiler until thickened, the brown sugar, egg yolks, pumpkin, milk, salt and spices, then add the softened gelatin. Allow to cool. When it starts to congeal, fold in the meringue made of the stiffly beaten egg whites with sugar and orange juice added gradually. Pour into the unbaked gingersnap crust and chill. Garnish with whipped cream if desired.

Wild Duck's Flavor Helped by Carrot

Nearly all wild ducks are likely to have a gamey flavor and unless properly cooked will be unfit to eat.

This flavor can be made less noticeable by placing in each duck a small peeled carrot, plunging the fowls in boiling water and simmering them for ten minutes before roasting. The carrot will absorb some of the unpleasant taste. An onion will have somewhat the same effect, but unless a stuffing of onions is used, the carrot is preferred.

If the ducks are young there may be an objection to parboiling. In this case rub each duck lightly with a cut onion and put three or four uncooked cranberries in each before cooking.

Top Glazed Sweet Potatoes With Marshmallows

Sliced cooked sweet potatoes dipped in melted butter and sprinkled with sugar can be baked to a beautiful glaze in the oven. A marshmallow added to each slice a few minutes before the potatoes emerge from the oven will provide a garnish as well as a perfection of flavor. The glass heat-resistant type of baking pan pictured above makes it possible to serve the potatoes in the same pan in which they are glazed.

Glazed Sweet Potatoes and Marshmallows Are Delicious When Large, Moist Variety Is Used

They Should Be Served in Dish in Which They Were Baked.

THE entirely different appearance, color and texture of the flesh of the two outstanding varieties of sweet potatoes grown in America have made many persons class them as two different vegetables. The sweet potato that becomes dry and mealy upon cooking and is light yellow in color is rightly called a sweet potato. The other variety—the large, moist-fleshed potato of deep orange color—commonly raised and eaten in great quantities in the Southern States, is frequently incorrectly referred to as a yam.

While a yam is similar in appearance and flavor to a sweet potato it is rarely used as a source of food in the United States. A few are raised in Louisiana and Florida, but not in large enough quantity to make them appear frequently in the markets.

Yam Popular in Tropics.

The yam, however, is used as a source of food in the West Indies and other tropical regions. It may attain a length of seven or eight feet and a weight of 100 pounds. Naturally the small roots are the choicest.

Despite the southern cultivation of the true yam, the "yam" of southern markets is generally a large sweet potato.

The dry, mealy sweet potato is usually at its best when mashed or served with gravy. The large, moist variety with a deep orange color will slice without breaking and takes a beautiful glaze with sugar or sirup and for that reason is the variety suggested for the glazed sweet potatoes and marshmallows included in the Sunday dinner menu. Prepare the potatoes in the following manner.

Cut cooked sweet potatoes into halves lengthwise. Dip in melted butter and sprinkle with granulated sugar. Place in heat-resistant shallow glass pan or pie pan and glaze in the oven.

Serve at the table from the same dish in which they were baked.

On Pastry-Mixing.

Pastry that is prepared by working the fat into the flour with the finger tips will be of a crumbly texture, while the dough that is prepared by cutting the shortening into the flour with two knives will have a flaky appearance. Both, however, should be crisp and tender.

Dressing Table Box.

New light is being cast upon the problems of make-up with a dressing table box which is automatically illuminated. The box is fashioned entirely of mirrors. A circular make-up mirror in the top is surrounded by small lights which go on when the lid is lifted. In addition to its practical features the box makes a stunning accessory for a dressing table.

Taste of Honey Varies; Imparts Flavor to Food

Product From One Flower May Please Palate More Than Another.

FEW PERSONS realize that honey, like so many other foods, comes in a variety of flavors. Each flavor is due to the aromatic substances found in the flowers from which it is gathered.

An experienced honey user will be able to tell by tasting the different honeys from just what flower the honey has been gathered. Those who do not realize that each flower makes a difference in the product's flavor may buy a honey to which they are not accustomed, and because the flavor is different than the last tasted product, feel that it is of inferior quality. This, however, does not mean that the honey is not good, but that one flower flavor may be more appealing to the palate than another.

When you find a honey that is of a satisfactory flavor it is wise to inquire the brand name and also, if possible, find out if the honey packaged by this particular concern is a uniform product, or always gathered from the same flower.

In general the lighter colored honeys, such as clovers, orange, sage, alfalfa and blends are milder in flavor and finer for general use in salads, sauces, fruits, sandwiches and the like. Southern honeys, such as cotton, sourwood, gallberry and the tupelo, are sweetly flavored and exceptionally fine for chocolate combinations like brownies, fudge cake, fudge candies, plum puddings, steamed puddings, such as suet, Indian and the like, nut cookies and spiced cider or fruit punches.

It would be disastrous, for example, from a point of flavor, to use buckwheat honey as a sweetening for cheese cake, but in spice cookies the same honey produces an unusually fine flavor.

When honey is added to a food it not only sweetens but flavors it as well. Honey is sweetness plus flavor. In many foods a small amount of honey gives the desired sweetness and intensifies the natural flavors.

Honey requires special care if keeping qualities are to be prolonged. Liquid honey should be kept in a warm, dry place where the temperature is 75 degrees F. Freezing does not injure the flavor or color of honey, but it may hasten granulation. Do not put comb honey in the refrigerator. It is better kept in the pantry at room temperature.

A Delicious Dressing.

Melted butter, to which a few teaspoons of lemon juice is added, makes a delicious dressing for cooked greens and broccoli.

Evaporated Milk Hint.

Evaporated milk triples itself in whipping, whereas cream only doubles. If your recipe calls for one-half cup whipping cream, use only one-third cup evaporated milk to obtain same amount when whipped.

Heat the Knife Blade.

To cut fresh bread in even slices, heat the blade of your knife by passing it through the gas flame.

Has REPEAL Solved the LIQUOR PROBLEM

Has Repeal proved to be any more noble an experiment than Prohibition?

In October, Senator Capper, of Kansas, predicted that Prohibition was rapidly coming to the fore as a political issue. Is the United States on the verge of another of those knock-down and drag-out fights between Wets and Drys?

What does America think about Repeal today?

The American Institute of Public Opinion has sent ballots into every State in the country to determine public sentiment on this issue. Personal interviewers have been talking to voters in 75 centers. The result of this accurate, impartial, Nation-wide poll will be announced in

Mr. Hopkins On Government.

Harry Hopkins' protest against being considered a second Jim Farley was superfluous. In spite of his unwarranted attack upon Gov. Landon, it is incontestable that Mr. Hopkins is not actuated by political motives. Under his direction the FERA has not been free from politics, but its director throughout has made vigorous and sincere effort to eliminate graft and favoritism wherever found.

It is not as a politician directing the Government's most prolific spending agency that Mr. Hopkins has forced criticism to focus on his devoted head. If that were the case the relief administrator would stand exonerated by his own candid discussion of the Kansas situation. For no politician holding a responsible Federal position would assert with such gorgeous naivete that he has tried repeatedly to bring about a change in the Constitution of Kansas, or that he finds some forms of local taxation more "acceptable" than others.

These comments, however, very clearly illumine a most salient objection to the whole FERA set-up. Its policy, whether by design or plain stupidity, rides roughshod over the traditions, laws and basic rights of the States which form our Federal Union. Mr. Hopkins now admits that his antagonism to Gov. Landon arises from the refusal of Kansas to modify its fundamental law in accordance with the wishes of a temporary bureaucrat in Washington. Such incredible effrontery may be even more destructive of efficient government in this country than any wholesale injection of politics into the distribution of relief.

Not content with requesting changes in State constitutions to suit his taste, Mr. Hopkins also sets himself up as a judge of taxation. "I don't like" the sales tax, he observes. But "any other form of taxation would be acceptable." It is about time for somebody to tell Harry Hopkins that his opinion on tax systems is not worth the one thin dime he is so fond of mentioning to others.

When an official so arrogant, so bumptious, so blissfully ignorant of political and economic science, is authorized to distribute billions of dollars in his own sweet way the demoralizing effect upon national welfare is bound to be sweeping and lasting. That is one reason why local institutions are now finding it very difficult to reassume the responsibility of caring for their own unemployed. Substantial obligations are being shifted back to them after their traditional functions have been messed up by a good-hearted, conscientious bungler.

It's a little late in the day now, but a boondoggling job assigning Harry Hopkins to study the American system of government would have been the most constructive move the FERA could possibly have made.

Subservient China.

Japanese reaction to the announcement that the Chinese government proposes to nationalize silver and resort to a managed currency indicates only too clearly how completely the Chinese have fallen under the domination of the island empire.

Japanese circles are said to be "stunned" by Nanking's failure to consult Tokyo in advance of this move. They are also alarmed and indignant at rumors (since denied) that China has been promised a stabilization loan by Great Britain. If China is to receive the financial assistance urgently required to make her new currency system workable, it is evident that Japan intends to have a dominant voice in deciding what is to be done.

Especially revealing of the impotence of the Chinese government to give effect to its policies in face of Japanese opposition is the debate that is going on as to whether Japanese banks domiciled in China shall obey the silver nationalization order. A spokesman for the Japanese Foreign Office has stated that the banks would be left free to adopt whatever course they thought advisable. This calm assumption that China dare not apply force, if they ignore the decree, bodes ill for the success of the new currency experiment. But it is completely in keeping with the underground moves whereby the Japanese military have just ousted the Mayor of Peiping in order to replace him with a nominee of their own choosing.

With the full co-operation of Japan, the difficulties in the way of an effort to stabilize China's currency would be formidable. With Japan definitely hostile, the chances are that the plan will fail ingloriously, possibly to be superseded by some arrangement that will link Chinese currency to the yen. If Japan should decide to take that step, China's political subservience would be emphasized by making her also a monetary satellite of her unacknowledged overlord.

A Sweeping Decision.

According to Federal Judge William C. Coleman, Congress "flagrantly exceeded its lawful power under the commerce clause of the Constitution" in passing the public utility holding company act. The national legislature is also accused of violating the Fifth Amendment prohibiting the taking of property without "due process of law" by incorporating provisions that are "grossly arbitrary, unreasonable and capricious." The court held, too, that denial of the use of the mails as a penalty for failure to comply with the terms of the act was an unlawful exercise of authority. Judge Coleman likewise questioned (although he did not undertake to decide) whether Congress had the right to delegate such extensive discretionary powers to the S.E.C. without establishing adequate and intelligent standards to guide and assist it.

The Government's charges that the parties to the suit were in collusion were summarily disposed of, and the advantage of a speedy decision of moot issues was rightly emphasized. A final test of the constitutionality of the law, of course, can only be had by an appeal to the Supreme Court. It is to be hoped that final decision will be rendered before the companies are subjected to the drastic regulatory provisions of the existing statute.

The sweeping character of the Baltimore decision calls attention to important aspects of the controversial legislation which have beeen more or less ignored by a public chiefly interested in the congressional battle over the so-called "death sentence" clause. Private investors, as well as the companies, are vitally concerned about the administration of this section of the law. But almost everybody will be affected by the conflicts of jurisdiction between State and Federal regulatory authorities that are certain to arise under the Wheeler-Rayburn act.

It is, therefore, in the national interest speedily to terminate the uncertainties and anxieties created by the passage of this dubiously constitutional measure. Yet Representative O'Connor, who is in charge of the investigation into utility lobbying, simultaneously declares that the utilities have been "brazen" in their publicity methods since passage of the regulatory law. Brazen they have been, but to match that attitude by one which is purely punitive advances solution of the problem not one bit.

If Congress had been content to regulate the utilities and eliminate evil practices without setting out on an orgy of destruction, the temptation to ignore constitutional limitations upon Federal powers would not have been so great, and opposition to enforcement would have been relatively easy to overcome. Unfortunately the lack of legislative restraint has led to the passage of a punitive measure that in the opinion of many jurists cannot be reconciled with constitutional guarantees.

If the decision of Judge Coleman should prove binding it would not necessarily mean a return to a regime of relative freedom from restraint. Not only are the States armed with extensive powers to control operating companies, if they choose to do so, but there is no doubt that Congress has the authority to pass a reasonable regulatory law that will discipline, without destroying, the interstate holding companies that now escape effective control.

But until the fate of the present law is definitely determined, the regulated industry will remain in a state of suspense, with both company managements and potential investors unwilling to invest capital in an expansion program. Since the public utilities represent an immense capital aggregate, and are among the chief buyers of basic raw materials, this ill-drafted legislation must be regarded as in the upshot a major block to recovery.

Trees And Treaties.

Fifteen years ago millions of tree seeds were sent abroad to replenish the war-depleted forests of the allied nations. It is interesting to learn from a report of the American Tree Association, sponsor of the shipment, that the great majority have taken firm root and are flourishing as abundantly as if they were not on alien soil. Besides their practical purpose, they were presented to Great Britain, France, Italy and Belgium as tokens of international amity and peace.

These young trees, which were gathered as seeds from the newest part of the New World, are now an integral part of historic European settings. Some, transported from South Dakota, are silhouetted against the serene backgrounds immortalized in Kenilworth and Ivanhoe. Douglas firs shed their needles at the moat of St. Briavel's castle. And in the ancient forest of Dean thousands of Sitka spruce have long since forgotten their native woods of Washington and Oregon.

One of the greatest tolls of the World War was the destruction of forests. Many trees were felled by shell fire. Far more were chopped down for myriad war needs. Now the barren ground is yielding another harvest of wooded areas under skies in which war clouds again are hovering. There is irony in the statement of Mr. C. L. Pack, president of the American Tree Association, that the girth of these trees "does not bring them into a war market." What a tragic paradox if these trees, planted to heal war-ravaged lands, should some day be used to form more crosses, "row on row."

Retribution In Germany.

The pages of the Frankfurter Zeitung, in pre-Nazi days considered one of the world's leading newspapers, are now literally crammed with "for sale" notices which throw a sinister light upon the economic damage caused to Germany by the Hitler regime. Long established businesses, especially textile concerns, are on the market. Sometimes the owner states that an Aryan purchaser is desired. Often he expresses a wish to exchange his holdings for a business located abroad.

Inevitably such wholesale liquidation, carried on under political pressure, results in great loss to the hapless seller and undeserved gains to the Aryan buyer. However, the Nazis are learning that bargains obtained under present conditions are not unmixed blessings. The paper guardedly notes, for instance, that there has been a widespread decline in real estate and stock values as a result of the concentrated selling pressure. Whole industries have been injured by the forced withdrawal of Jewish owners. And the export trade, already hit by a foreign boycott, has suffered from the loss of foreign connections maintained by liquidated concerns.

Faced by these natural consequences of the campaign against the Jews, Dr. Schacht, who is minister of economics for the Reich, is doing his utmost to curb the mob spirit to which the Third Reich caters. Its vicious tactics are calculated to increase the number of forced sales and virtually expropriate Jewish owners of business concerns. Such activities have already led to a capital flight, thereby adding to the troubles of Dr. Schacht, who as head of the Reichsbank, is concerned to build up Germany's foreign trade balances. Indeed, the problem of financing necessary imports has been a desperate one for many months. Recently it has been made worse by a rise in world prices of foodstuffs and raw materials needed by Germany.

So it is not surprising that the German minister of economics, faced by a further drain upon meager exchange resources and harassed by the domestic disturbances created by wholesale liquidation of property, is anxiously seeking to stop these suicidal persecutions. Behind the purely financial and economic disturbances which confront the Nazi government, moreover, looms political disaffection, which is likely to become menacing if the German people find their already severely curtailed consumption of foreign foodstuffs further curtailed.

In short, the Jewish property acquired at sacrifice prices may turn out to be a very bad bargain. Dr. Schacht, an able financier, not blinded by ridiculous prejudices, is undoubtedly aware of the mounting dangers ahead, no longer concealable by the efforts of the ministry of propaganda.

Philadelphia Blues.

Whatever of joy or sorrow the politicians may have gleaned from Tuesday's elections at large, for the true-blue conservative there is no consolation in Philadelphia's referendum upon Sunday movies. The cities of Pennsylvania divided about evenly upon that local issue. But the erstwhile home-town of William Penn led those which decided that, for the next four years, the silver screen may flicker, within their limits, every first day after 2 p. m.

Even the liberal may spare a tear in contemplating this innovation. That is, if such a liberal be liberal enough to appreciate the liberalizing value of ancient and severely observed traditions—and if he himself has never had any personal experience of the Quaker City's sterner side.

Say what you will, a certain somber magnificance crowned the traditional Philadelphia Sunday. To the merely frivolous it was a recurring ordeal. Even to the serious-minded it was far from pleasant. Yet the Sabbath in Philadelphia always wore something like the ermine of perfect assurance, wielded a scepter approaching unquestionable absolutism. It brooked no compromise with human weakness.

The Philadelphia "blue laws" were almost an imperial purple. As an irreplaceable national institution, we mourn their passing.

A woman press correspondent found Il Duce eating an olive. Before it was served to him, however, the branch had been carefully removed.

Making The Most Of A Bad Bargain.

From The Kansas City Times.

Although it will not be officially admitted, the vast spending program designed to end direct relief by the Government not only is failing to achieve its purpose within the time that was set and repeatedly announced, but is affording scant promise of the accomplishment at any future date.

Only six States have been removed from the Federal relief rolls, and they were allotted funds sufficient to tide them over a considerable period before that action was taken. Other States, including Missouri, are calling for the usual relief allotments for next month, notwithstanding the fact that the deadline of November 1 had been fixed.

In behalf of the State requests have been made for considerably more money than can be expected, a total of approximately $222,000,000. Originally, less than $100,000,000 had been designated for Missouri, including such major projects as highways (especially farm-to-market roads) the CCC camps, river improvement and other undertakings.

The returns should be made commensurate with the expenditures. Disappointing as the spending program has been to date, Missouri and the rest of the country will have to get the maximum benefits that are possible from it.

Filling Local Positions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was very much interested in the letter written by John M. Kirby regarding "outsiders in District of Columbia jobs," which appeared in The Post of November 6. I would like to add a few remarks to his illuminating illustrations.

The local board of education holds examinations for filling the positions in our local public schools. Appointments are made upon the basis of a written and an oral examination, the person with the highest rating receiving the appointment, regardless of his or her legal residence. In this manner the best qualified people are selected to teach here, the place of origin not entering into the question. This is all well and good, but how do the various States operate? In most cases the State or county boards of education require that the applicants be residents of that particular State, in other words, "charity begins at home."

The positions of school teachers and of police and firemen as well are not so highly specialized that the local government has to go afield to find suitable eligibles to fill such jobs. Is it a question of politics or just another example of laws which need revision?

Consider The Cat.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Ever since reading in The Post last spring a delightful series of articles in which every dog had his day, I have been wishing that similar amount of space might be devoted to praise of cats.

Now, happily, the impending cat show, to be held at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria on Saturday and Sunday of this week, is affording an opportunity for the cat to come into his own and many readers are delighted with the increasing number of what Oliver Herford called pussynality stories about cats now making their appearance in the newspapers.

Without any desire to disparage dogs or draw invidious comparisons I am still unable to understand why so many will protect and cherish a dog and so few will have consideration for a cat. It is true that a dog is more unquestioningly slavish in his devotion and demonstrative in display of his affection than a cat, which is flattering to a crude nature. But once win a cat's confidence and gratitude and there is no more loyal, faithful and affectionate companion who will express his devotion in a hundred subtle and charming little ways.

A cat is quiet, orderly, fastidious and graceful and fits into his surroundings with admirable tact and decorum. The cat's love of cleanliness amounts to a passion.

All through history cats have been despised or ignored by the many, admired and loved by the discerning few. Many great men from Cardinal Richelieu to Mark Twain have been devoted to a favorite cat. No pet requires so little as a cat and gives so much in return.

Supports T. B. Campaign.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At a meeting of the District Chiropody-Podiatry Society Tuesday night, the speaker of the evening, Dr. Seckinger, assistant to Dr. Ruhland, brought out many interesting but startling facts. One was that Washington ranks next to the highest in percentage of deaths from tuberculosis, surpassed only by one city, San Antonio, Tex. The rate of death from tuberculosis in Washington is 123 per 100,000 population annually. Whereas the average for the United States is only 57 deaths a year for every 100,000 population.

Right here in our own city there are six deaths from tuberculosis to every one from traffic casualties. This has become so alarming that Congress has appropriated funds for a District antituberculosis drive, starting the week of November 25. This will be for the free X-ray examination of individuals suspected of having tuberculosis and for enlarging the staff of public health nurses.

The District Chiropody-Podiatry Society went on record at this meeting as pledging its full support and co-operation with this new antituberculosis campaign to be launched.

The Policeman's Lot.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been reading in several Washington papers about the trouble between the Georgetown boys and the "Cossacks" of Richmond, as your Karl Schriftgiesser, of The Post, so puts it.

I am a policeman myself and have had a similar experience with a football crowd, although this did not concern the goal posts.

A policeman when working on an assignment, such as a football game, is under orders to his superior officers. So why blame the lowly cop? And until the public learns to respect and tries to understand the duties of a police officer, then we will continue to have such affairs. If the public does not respect the law officers then we cannot have law enforcement. These people who are now criticizing the cops are the ones who holler the loudest when they need a cop and one is not on the spot.

The lowly cop is nothing but a football in this game of life, because when he does right he is kicked around and when he does wrong he is kicked that much harder.

A Previous Canadian Treaty.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As an old-fashioned Grover Cleveland Democrat, who was converted from the protective tariff delusion by reading Henry George's "Protection or Free Trade," may I offer a word of advice to the President regarding his proposed reciprocity arrangement with Canada.

Although you won't find it in the histories of the Taft regime it was the negotiation of the ill-fated Canadian Reciprocity Pact in 1911 that resulted in the election of Woodrow Wilson. The farmers, who had been promised protection to their industry in the Republican national platform of 1908, were so enraged over what they regarded as a betrayal of their interests for the purpose of giving the newspapers free newsprint that they served notice on the Republican leaders that under no circumstances would they vote for the re-election of Mr. Taft. A letter from Nahum J. Bachelder, master of the National Grange, to Theodore Roosevelt, asserting that the farmer vote would be almost unanimous against Taft was, I was told by a close friend and adviser of Mr. Roosevelt, the chief influence that decided Teddy to throw his hat in the ring and run for President on the Bull Moose ticket.

The Democratic pledges of 1932 to reduce the tariff taxes on everything the farmers buy have not been lived up to. If now the President repeats Taft's blunder, and makes possible increased importations of free products from Canada, there will be a howl of protests from our farmers that will represent a loss of millions of votes.

While I am a 100 per cent Free Trader I do not believe in what Senator Joe Bailey described as "jug-handled free trade" — high tariff for the manufacturers and free trade for the farmers. So long as protection is the national policy, the farmers are entitled to sufficient protection to give them the domestic market for their products. With the AAA cutting down production in the United States for the purpose of raising prices of farm products, any action to depress prices by admitting more Canadian products to our markets will turn the farmer vote back to the Republicans.

The Post Impressionist

First Aid To Book-Reviewers

Post Office, Saturday.

THE autumnal publication-deluge has begun. Prof. Hall's desk is 5 feet deep in new books never envisaged by Pres. Eliot's 5-foot shelf. Brother Schriftgiesser is contending with the composition of—but you'll know in good time what he is busy about; it will bear his by-line. Therefore, the time has come for our Column to run up the Red Cross flag, be a good neighbor and speed to the relief of distressed colleagues: we must write some book-reviews.

European Experiences. By Mabel Dodge Luhan. (Harcourt-Brace): The author has married, successively, Karl Evans, Edwin Dodge, Maurice Sterne and Antonio Luhan—a Buffalo (N. Y.) hunter, a Boston architect, a painter and a Pueblo Indian. She has had a salon "where artists mingled with anarchists." So we find that she can write of many an old acquaintance—"Hutch" Hapgood, Lincoln Steffens, Isadora Duncan, Jo Davidson, Max Eastman and Margaret Sanger. Mrs. Luhan can also write intimately—and does—about the birth of her son.

Amy Lowell. By S. Foster Damon. (Houghton-Mifflin): Declaredly the definitive biography of its heroine, it has got to have a column to itself—and Schrift, of Boston, or Hall, of Harvard, will have to do it. The last time the Post-Impressionist saw the amiable Amy was in a Pullman out of Brunswick, Me. "Any seats?" we asked the porter. "Well, boss," he answered, "there's only two people in the car—but one of 'em is Miss Lowell." We should like to supplement S. Foster's huge text by some of the things that she said about some of the people who now praise her. But an unsigned department has limitations: we mustn't saddle the risk of wrath on the back of anonymity.

Land of the Free. By Herbert Agar. (Houghton-Mifflin): Here is a phenomenon, a Pulitzer Prize which deserves to be. "The Simple Life" up-to-date, "Land of the Free" contends that, after its Civil War, America, by turning to super-industrialism, turned into the wrong road—and its author thinks America ought to turn back. Carried to its logical conclusion, as the Post-Impressionist would like to see it carried, the Agar thesis would contend that the way to get out of the Machine Age is to blow out the machines. Mr. Agar, we suspect, presents a case of normal claustrophobia—city-hatred. So do we. He believes places like Pittsburgh haven't any culture. Brother Schritt believes they should develop culture. The Post-Impressionist believes they can't.

George Colman the Elder. By Eugene R. Page. (Columbia University Press): This is not the Colman, dramatist (1762-1836), George, elder of the First Presbyterian Church of Buenos Aires. The present Colman is that past George Colman, dramatist (1732-1794), who was elder than his son George Colman dramatist (1762-1836), George, Sr., wrote or adapted 45 plays, burlesques and musical shows, and they were pretty much all produced, too—which wouldn't be a bad bag for George Kaufman. Why, the originals included "The Clandestine Marriage" that George Washington applauded! And to Colman's adaptation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," though Garrick guaranteed its success vainly, the 1935 screen-version owes much. Elder Colman knew all the great of his great epoch. Moreover, as an historic manager, he made the Haymarket Theatre and, like most modern Broadway managers, he had a pretty talent for Latin verse. Dr. Page paints a pleasant picture of Colman's times; if you don't like those times—well, you ought to.

LITERARY NOTES.

Liveright announces for December publication the English text of the Chinese play "Lady Precious Stream," which—so our New York friend the World-Telegram intimates—is "by S. I. Hsiung, who has just arrived in America." If our poor impression is correct, Mr. Hsiung must then be rather mature, for we always understood that this work was written several centuries ago . . . There is talk of its being produced on the American stage. Should you be one of the thousands of our readers who, far from scrapping these columns, scrap-book them, you will find our last year's resume of "Lady Precious Stream" fairly complete . . .

There used to be a kind of book which was wicked and witty and was condemned as pornographic. Its modern prototype having become mostly dull and only unintentionally humorous, we call it "liberal" . . . Were we reviewing the Doctors Stone's "Marriage Manual," we should describe it as the Kama Sutra for puritans . . .

Our uncandid contemporary, the New York Herald Tribune, presents itself as a candidate for the Whipping-Post by listing Annie Nathan Meyer's work on the development of Barnard College as "Barnyard Beginnings" . . . But even Westbrook Pegler, Ph.D., has toted the new League of Nations "palace" across the Lake of Geneva and plumped that building down "on the big toe of one of the Alpine foothills."

Paris At Random

The Flower Booths.

Paris.

THERE may be many ways of being fond of flowers. The Swiss adorn their window sills with vivid rows of flashy geraniums. The Dutch are famous the world over for the varieties of their gorgeous tulips. English gardens are known for the abundance of their flowery patches. And no well-to-do American woman, it seems, would think her home was really as it should be if she had not arranged roses or gladiolas in the right spots.

The French have no such reputation. Yet there can be few other cities in the world where flowers are put on sale with such alluring taste as in Paris, and where so many people, particularly street vendors, can make a living out of it.

There must be hundreds of them, mostly women. Curiously enough, the majority of them operate in the business sections of the town where their small 1-franc bunches (a little over 8 cents) seem to sell like hot cakes, especially at lunch time and after business hours, when thousands upon thousands of working girls stop and buy flowers. It is not unusual in a French office to see most of the desks enlivened with one rose, one carnation, a handful of violets or a few sprigs of lily of the valley, according to the season.

* * * *

THOSE women who carry heaps of flowers for sale in huge, high baskets which they can place on the sidewalks, at strategic positions at street corners, are a source of pleasure both for the artist and visitor. Their colorful and fragrant stocks of goods make a bright spot in the crowd and their loud advertising attracts the loiterer's attention. The most business-minded among them have their "flying agents," in the form of one or two lassies who go about with handfuls of violets or mimosas and whose task it is to meet possible purchasers on their own ground, i. e. the sidewalk.

Higher up in the hierarchy of flower dealers are scores of flower booths disposed along the boulevards, at a short distance from one another, like regular news stands. They offer a much greater choice, but their real distinction is a slate that dangles in the wind with a different name written on it every day. It is a discreet way of reminding you of the day's patron saint so that, if you have a friend by that name, you can hurry and buy some flowers to wish him "bonne fete"—unfailing French habit.

* * * *

AMONG the many markets that add so much color to Paris street life, none is more charming than the two flower markets that are held biweekly around the Madeleine and at the footsteps of the Court of Justice.

On Tuesdays and Fridays it is always a surprise to find thousands of square feet in the very heart of the business section, covered with all kinds of flowers that have bloomed overnight, from the common zinnia to the high-priced orchid. They tend to jut out in the street, and even clumsy buses are careful not to run over their dainty buds. And you should see the place during the month of December, when Christmas trees for sale make it look like a regular pine forest.

The other public market, the one which stands in the "Cite" island, near the Palace of Justice, the Conciergerie Prison and the police headquarters, has been held there regularly on Wednesdays and Saturdays for 125 years. Those who know a lot about the past will tell you how much more attractive it was when each sales girl was allowed to build herself an individual booth in foliage and branches. But as it is now, with chrysanthemums almost falling over the embankment into the Seine, it is quite a lovely sight.

* * * *

THE way certain old French organizations are kept working in obsolete and conservative fashion sometimes goes beyond description. Alfred Vallette, who died a few days ago and who was a Paris literary figure, was almost coquettish about refusing to have the telephone installed at the French Mercury, of which he was the director and which he founded in 1890.

A platform for all the literary talent of the prewar period, the French Mercury still was a widely circulated monthly of a high standing. But its director answered all his letters in handwriting and every day, at nightfall, he would get up to light the gas lamp over his desk. It is understood that the new management is having electricity put up all over the place. But the question of the telephone will come later.

"Hello, mon veux, why do you look so sad?"

"Don't you know that I am a bankrupt?"

"Sure, I know. But you've put your money in your wife's name, have you not?"

"No, I haven't."

"You have children?"

"Yes, three."

"Well, I guess you must have put a little fortune in each of your children's names?"

"No, I haven't."

"No? I hope, at least, you've opened an account with a foreign bank?"

"Neither."

"Why, my [illegible]v, then you are not a ba[illegible] ruined."

Boon To Il Duce

Sanctions Tend To Strengthen Mussolini's Grip On Nation As Population Pulls Up Belt; Overtures To Brazil Significant.

By Andre Vulliet.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

IT IS amusing to consider that one of the possible consequences of the economic and financial sanctions now applied against Italy as a means of stifling her and slowly bringing to an end the war she is waging against Ethiopia, may be to help consolidate and develop the corporative regime, for years the mainstay of the Fascist doctrine and now in the course of application.

The Italian press and officials do not as yet tell how Fascist Italy is actually going to cope with the sanctions. The technical side of the question is not discussed publicly. But, on the psychological ground, both writers and spokesmen for these past weeks have stressed the fact and daily keep hammering it home that the already frugal Italian people will have to show even greater frugality.

"Sanctions will be met with sobriety," they say. If the Italians can stand it, that is if they do not revolt in the meantime, this will undoubtedly mean a gradual "proletarianisation" of Italy as, in a financial and economic mobilization of the country, those who have something under the sun will be called upon to suffer heavier losses than those, who already are at the limit of the white man's standard of living.

Cornered by two-thirds of the world and compelled to round up and put under government control all its national resources, Fascist Italy may well turn away more and more from capitalism, at least from the "bourgeois" spirit and conception of life. Thus, it is possible that Italy will be gradually drawn into a more and more socialistic form of nationalism or a more nationalistic form of socialism, as you like, which, in fact, is the very basis of Fascism, of the German "National-Socialism," and of many such political movements in many other countries, including France.

A FACT which went almost unnoticed at the time when the League of Nations was busy voting sanctions and setting up their complicated machinery, was the stealthy departure from Genoa of Italian Undersecretary of Corporations Asquini. He was bound for Brazil "to negotiate a new commerce treaty."

In this connection it may be interesting to recall that Brazil is not a member of the League of Nations; that it is not bound by any sanction voted at Geneva; that it can supply Italy with all the wood and cattle which she now buys from Yugoslavia and the Scandinavian countries. Moreover, it should be remembered that there are several million Italians in South America, many of whom have kept alive the bonds which unite them to their native country. It is significant, for instance, that the Italian colony in Argentina, which numbers more than 1,000,000, has decided to boycott British products. An extension of Mr. Asquini's trip down to Argentina would not be at all surprising.

Then another factor which can not be overlooked when trying to figure out how quickly the economic sanctions will bring Italy to her knees and how long she will be able to buy from those countries which will not apply the sanctions, is the amount of foreign holdings now at the disposal of the Fascist government. These foreign holdings were compulsorily turned over to the Fascist government by their private owners last September, long before the sanctions were voted. They are estimated at from 4,000,000,000 to 8,000,000,000 liras. But nobody knows exactly what they amount to and how long they will last.

* * * *

THERE may be a thousand and one highly diplomatic reasons why the French are so reluctantly following Great Britain on the sanctions path, but the main cause of the present divergence of views between the French and the British, as it appears here, is of a psychological order. The truth of the matter seems to be that the British are asking the French to embark upon a policy of sanctions which may possibly degenerate into another war while the Italians are asking them nothing.

Of course, the issue is not one between France and England, but rather one putting to test the efficiency of the League of Nations' machinery. On this ground, however, the French are convinced that they have shown relatively more attachment to the Geneva pact than any other nation under the sun as they have announced they are ready to stick to their international obligations despite the possible risks involved and the fact that their immediate interest may be to keep out.

Many a Frenchman in the street thinks he should not get entangled in the complications that may arise out of the British home fleet's presence in the Mediterranean Sea, since the British men-of-war were sent down to mount guard in those waters long before the Geneva Assembly decided anything and without the French government having been consulted on the matter. In this respect, it seems most Frenchmen would accept to line up unreservedly with Britain if they felt it was binding for her in the future. But they always try to figure out what would happen should a similar case arise on land, when France mobilized along her eastern frontier, for instance, as a precautionary measure against an eventual danger and before the League of Nations had taken a decision. Should France ask the British government for the same sort of help for her troops as Great Britain has just been asking from the French government for her home fleet, there is a large number of Frenchmen who are not so sure that the reply would be an unconditional okay.

* * * *

MOREOVER, it is not an exaggeration to say that the French attitude in this Italo-Abyssinian conflict corresponds, to a certain extent, to a sort of natural—if unavowed—ill feeling against the British. The Franco-British friendship is a thing of the "elite." It may even be regarded as a necessity or taken for granted by a good many people. It is not really commanded by any mutual feeling among the masses at large. Much in the same way as the Anglo-Saxons are bound to exaggerate the French "Machiavelism," so are the French apt to distrust the English and deny them the benefit of any disinterested action.

A curious fact about a colonial empire is that it usually costs more than it pays. It certainly does at the beginning. To be sure, it may satisfy a nation's pride forever, but it never helps her solve her demographic problems.

Fascist Italy is laying particular emphasis on her need for expansion and seems to feed its people on the illusion that Ethiopia might become a promised land for Italy's yearly surplus of people.

But look at the British Empire. It is the largest in the world, yet more than two million Englishmen have been on the dole for the past ten years or so. Look at small Belgium, with its sprawling Congo covering vast expanse of the African continent. But Belgium is as crowded as it ever was. Look at Holland, whose colonies are flourishing and certainly healthier than Ethiopia. Yet, she spent millions and millions to fill up the Zuyder Zee and regain some land at the expense of the sea. As to Morocco, that wonderful French protectorate in Northern Africa, not more than 20,000 Frenchmen had the courage to go down there and settle.

Don't Mention It.

No End Of Books

Books for Children

IF there is a more enterprising literary group in the District than the Library Club (formerly the Torch Club) of Wilson Teachers College, it must be conducting itself with all the silence of the OGPU. Your correspondent has not heard of any which shows the get-up and gumption of this band of young people on their way to becoming teachers. Last year they held a great banquet for the winner of the Newberry Medal, the annual award for the best children's book of the year, and it was a pretty fine affair, I can tell you.

This year — tonight, to be precise—they are extending themselves. An "ABC Banquet," for Authors of Books for Children, will bring to the Mayflower rather more celebrities than we've had in one place here since the Disarament Conference. Let me give you a brief notion of some of the expected guests: Padraic Colum; Joseph Auslander; Mrs. J. Auslander (Audrey Wurdemann, winner of the Pulitzer Prize for poetry last year); Floyd Dell; Charles J. Finger (Newbery medalist, 1927); Allen Chaffee; Archibald Rutledge (John Burroughs) medalist, 1930); Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton; Howard R. Driggs; Arthur Bowie Chrisman (Newbery medalist, 1925); Elizabeth Foreman Lewis (Newbery medalist, 1933)—these from out of town. Local lights: Herman Hagedorn; Elizabeth Conner Lindsay (wife of Vache1); Marie Agnighito Peary (daughter of the admiral); Mary Nourse; Lucile Quarry Mann (wife of Dr. Mann, of the Zoo); Frances Carpenter (Mrs. William Chapin Huntington); Stanley R. Harris, and William Atherton DuPuy—all authors. Top off with Mrs. Roosevelt, the Minister of Guatemala, the Minister of the Irish Free State, the Second Secretary of the Chinese Legation, and Lawrence Tibbett, of the Metropolitan and the movies for good measure, and I think you'll grant that the Library Club has assembled the makings of a party.

All this, note well, to celebrate some tow-headed young idea climbing into a chair and curling down over a book.

* * * *

WHAT book might it be? Here's a running trip through the best of the new ones this fall. To give the "feel" of Latin—Paul L. Anderson's "Swords in the North," story of a young aristocrat in Caesar's Tenth Legion. Four new 25-cent "Pop-Up" books. Stories from Indian myths—"The Happy Animals of Ata-ga-hi," by Bessie Rowland James, wife of Marquis James (ages 5-10). "Gone Is Gone: The Story of a Man Who Wanted to Do Housework," written and illustrated by the amiable Wanda Gag—the retelling of a familiar German "Marchen." E. Nesbit's "The Wonderful Garden"—perennial. Successor to Irving Crump's "Og, Son of Fire" and "Og, Son of Battle"—"Og of the Cave People."

Phil Stong, author of "State Fair," retells one of his favorite after-dinner stories in "Honk the Moose," with 50 grand drawings by Kurt Wiese. A fairy story of Ireland—Patricia Lynch's "Turfcutter's Donkey" (ages 6-12). Story of the Ozarks—Charlie May Simon's "Lost Corner." The first portion of Lincoln Steffens' autobiography, grand for boys—"Boy on Horseback." An anthology of verse for children, illustrated by the beloved Reginald Birch—Louis Untermeyer's "Rainbow in the Sky." About a dog, "Waggery Town," by Philip Duncan, prime for ten up.

And look at these views of the great world. Commander E. Ellsburg's story of deep sea diving for treasure—"Ocean Goal." Mechanics of movie-making — "Moviemakers," by J. J. Floherty. Etiquette for girls—"It's More Fun When You Know the Rules," by Beatrice Pierce. Scientific exposition of the sea—W. Maxwell Reed's "The Sea for Sam," successor to "The Earth for Sam" and "The Stars for Sam." Stories of the Coast Guard—"Heroes of the Shoals," by Allen Chaffee. The whole telephone industry—"Live Wires," by Clara Lambert. "Automobiles From Start to Finish," by F. M. Reck. "The Pony Express Goes Through: An American Saga Told by Its Heroes," by Howard R. Driggs.

Add a new Mark Twain item, published this year for the first time—his translation, made for his own children, of "Slovenly Peter." And consider this for a new notion in juveniles — Hildegarde Hawthorne's "Youth's Captain," the life of Ralph Waldo Emerson; it isn't, you see, a law of the Medes and the Persians that children must have adventure. And if you think the craze of timeliness has passed by the children's field, note that we now have Elizabeth Borton's "Our Little Ethiopian Cousin."

Don't look into these unless you, gray-haired and deplorably adult, are willing to be a child again just for tonight.

Former Section Chief Of Railway Ends Life

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 8.—Despondent because of ill health and unemployment, William W. Tomlin, 67, former section foreman for the Southern Railway, fired a bullet into his head yesterday. He died at University Hospital.

Funeral services were conducted this afternoon at the home of W. I. Harlow, Chesapeake & Ohio machinist, by the Rev. T. Eugene West, assistant pastor of the First Baptist Church. Burial was in Riverview Cemetery. He is survived by five children.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Nellie, the Beautiful Grid Star.
("Girl Football Stars Increasing."
—Newspaper headline.)

I.

I'll never forget Big Nellie—
A gridiron star was she;
She blocked and she ran and tackled
With sullen ferocity;
We used her a while at fullback,
We tried her at tackle, too!
There wasn't a thing in football
Too tough for our Nell to do.

II.

Of course, she was tops at kicking
(All women shine there, you know);
And how she could heave those passes
An eighth of a mile or so!
She'd plunge where the fight was hottest,
And leap where the game was rough;
She'd outslug the toughest foeman—
Our Nellie was pretty tough.

III.

She liked to go in and mix it
In scrimmages fierce and wild;
Her daddy had been a wrestler
And she was his only child;
Her mother had been a blacksmith,
Her grandma had tended bar—
Instinctive was Nellie's war cry:
"Put me where the tough mugs are!"

IV.

Our varsity scout first saw her
Way down by the railroad tracks,
A star on the Brakemen's grid squad—
The best of all railroad backs!
He told her of life in college,
And so to our team she came . . .
We won all our games that season,
And landed the Rose Bowl game!

V.

Her fists were like hams—no fooling!
Her arms were like oaken limbs;
Her legs were like iron hydrants,
But still she had girlish whims . . .
At times Nell was sentimental—
They tell of that day at school
When, kicked in the face, she whispered:
"Ah, kiss me again, my fool!"

VI.

Emotional? Yes, she could be,
And that was her weakness, Pshaw!
We lost the big Rose Bowl battle
Because of that fatal flaw;
She failed on a crucial tackle
And this was the reason why:
Two yards from the costly touchdown
She found that she liked the guy!

VII.

We'd no one else there to stop him,
And over the goal he went;
The rest of the team went berserk,
But Nellie seemed quite content;
"I could have upset the bozo,"
She said as she looked afar,
"But he had such eyes! And, mister,
You know how we women are!

VIII.

Next season we dropped our Nellie;
'Twas plain she was slowing up,
But having to play without her,
My boys, was a bitter cup.
For women are simply women,
And this is a concept sound—
From kickoff to final whistle
It's nice to have one around!

Perking Up.

Extra dividends are back, Wall street is talking about bonuses once again, and it wouldn't surprise us much if we heard pretty soon that the smart golf clubs were beginning to cover expenses.

It's curious how much more attractive a stock looks at 50 than it did back when it was about $7 a share.

A school for brides in New York offers a course in cocktail mixing, shaking and serving. It takes a heap o' shakin' to make a place called home.

Gasoline is now $1.89 a gallon in Italy. How do you say "Fill 'er up!" in Italian? And what for?

Heywood Broun was in Miami during the hurricane. An inspection the day after revealed that he was undamaged and that he remains a splendid testimonial to that type of construction.

Heywood, the story goes, was out on a golf course shacking a few golf balls when the wind began to rise. Driving with a favorable gale, he was getting about 350 yards per smack. When the wind changed and cut his distance down to an average of 480 yards he threw down his clubs and demanded of the golf pro, "Hey! Do you think I'm slipping?"

Son Kept From School; W. Va. Farmer Fined

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., Nov. 8.—The first case in which a parent has been prosecuted by the county school board for wilful disobedience of the compulsory law since the appointment of an attendance officer earlier this year was presented yesterday before a local magistrate. Charles Staubs, farmer, of near Wheatland, was brought before Justice of the Peace J. D. Walker by H. S. Blessing, jr., attendance officer for the Jefferso nCounty School Board, who charged that he had been keeping his son out of school since the beginning of the term.

Blessing, who was the principal witness, was accompanied by the County Superintendent H. M. Sydner. Staubs pleaded guilty, and paid a fine of $3 and costs.

Christopher A. Greene Weds Ruth Hopkinson

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 8.—Christopher A. Greene, of Ivy Depot, and Miss Ruth Hopkinson, daughter of John Hopkinson, were married yesterday at St. Paul's Episcopal Church at Ivy. The Rev. Beverley T. White, rector of the church, officiated, assisted by Archdeacon Frederick W. Neve, rector emeritus.

Who Receives my COMMUNITY CHEST dollar?

"Why a Community Chest?"
"What Does It Do?"

Your Community Chest wields into ONE Federation 65 Human Welfare Agencies. Once each year your Chest appeals for the funds needed by these 65 Washington Welfare Agencies (listed below) for a whole year's Human Welfare service.

Your Community Chest does not itself do Welfare work. It receives and distributes, through careful supervision, YOUR MONEY given through it (the Community Chest) for these 65 Human Welfare Agencies.

COMMUNITY CHEST 1101 M St. N.W.

HE[illegible] your AM[illegible]ER!

"How Much of MY Dollar Really Helps the Needy of Washington?"

93c out of every dollar you contribute to your Community Chest is spent directly (by Washington Human Welfare Agencies) for Washington people who NEED this 65 different types of service.

Only 7c of your dollar is spent for the cost of giving such service. No business house in Washington could operate on as low a cost. Your volunteer Chest army of 5,500 Washingtonians makes such a low cost possible.

SOCIAL SERVICE EXCHANGE 1101 M St. N.W.

Armistice Day Rites Scheduled By Bible Class

Services to Be Held at 9:30 Tomorrow in Calvary Baptist Church.

Officially representing Bible classes throughout the United States, the Vaughn Bible Class of Calvary Baptist Church will conduct Armistice Day ceremonies tomorrow. District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will address an annual service at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow in Calvary Church. Tomorrow afternoon a committee, named by the class, will place a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery.

Vaughn Class, the oldest organized Bible class in the United States, was officially designated to conduct both services by the National Federation of Bible Classes.

In addition to Commissioner Hazen, talks at the morning public service will be given by Harlan D. Crowell, president of the national federation; Dr. W. S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Church; Page McK. Etchison, president of the Organized Bible Class Association, and Linn C. Drake, class teacher.

The committee to make the pilgrimage to Arlington Cemetery tomorrow afternoon includes T. Carlisle Crump, the Rev. Philip G. Murray and George E. Harris.

Members of the Stephen McGroarty Post, American Legion, will attend Armistice Day services in a body tomorrow morning at Falls Church Presbyterian Church. The services, in honor of Mr. McGroarty, a Falls Church resident after whom the post is named, will be featured by the Legion Armistice Day ceremonial. It will be conducted by four legionnaires directed by Charles Egner, post commander. The Rev. Alton B. Altfather, pastor, will give the sermon. Services will be started at 11 a. m.

To Conduct Mass.

Chaplain Walter H. Paschal, U. S. A., will conduct Catholic mass at 8:45 a. m. tomorrow in the Fort Myer Chapel. Chaplain Ralph C. Deibert will conduct Protestant worship at 11 a. m. services.

Nice Pushes Governors' Parley Plan

Wants State Executives to Confer on Halting of U. S. Aid.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 8.—Gov. Harry W. Nice of Baltimore today formally placed relief troubles of the States before the Governors' Conference, when he asked the executive secretary of the conference to call an immediate meeting for the discussion of relief.

The Governor took his action after Gov. Harry Lehman of New York had indirectly declined to summon such a meeting of State executives. Gov. Lehman referred Gov. Nice to former Gov. Cary A. Hardee, secretary to the Governors' Conference, a permanent group.

Money Goes Begging.

While Gov. Nice was dealing with relief in its national aspects, ohn J. Seidel, Maryland head of the National Youth Administration, reported that some Federal relief funds were going begging. Seidel has more than $90,000 available to help needy high school students, but applications have been received for less than $50,000 of it.

Informed that Gov. Nice was appealing to him, Hardee in Washington said that the call to a special meeting must be issued by the executive committee. Gov. McNutt of Indiana is chairman of the committee. Members are Govs. Nice, Gov. Horner of Illinois, Landon of Kansas and Scholtz of Florida.

Gov. Nice suggested several days ago that the Governors be called into conference to map concerted action on the problem which will face the States when Federal district relief is out December 1. He asked Gov. Lehman, as Governor of the largest State, to summon the group.

Nice Wires Hardee.

At the time, the New York Governor was in Washington conferring with Federal authorities on the particular problems New York could face when direct relief ended. He ended his conference satisfactorily to the State and departed for a short vacation. Today he answered Gov. Nice by saying that the request for the gubernatorial session should have been sent to Hardee.

Gov. Nice was on the Eastern Shore when he was notified that the Lehman telegram had been received. He instructed his office to send Hardee substantially te same telegram wic ad been sent to Gov. Leman.

Te relief funds wic nobody as asked for were earmarked by Federal authorities for aid to high schools. The money is doled out at the rate of $6 per month. County school authorities were requested to decide how many children in their area needed the money and then ask for it.

Money was provided to finance 1,740 chilren. So far, however, requests for aid for only 879 have been received.

F. R. Power on Council Of American Scholar

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 8.—F. Ray Power, assistant State superintendent of schools at West Virginia, has been named to the Readers' Council of the American Scholar by Dr. William A. Shimer, of the magazine.

The American Scholar is the quarterly publication of the Phi Beta Kappa and is devoted to the promotion of scholarship in high schools, colleges, and universities. The Readers' Council is composed of 15 educators and is charged with assisting in promoting the interests of the magazine by recommending new authors, criticizing manuscripts and suggesting articles.

Baltimore Experts Join Hunt For Woman's Mystery Slayer

Miss Pysell, 60, Killed in Garrett County by Blast Through Window.

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Md., Nov. 8.—Accompanied by Baltimore fingerprint experts, Garrett County officers today continued to seek a solution to the death of Miss Ella Pysell, 60, who was killed by a shotgun blast fired through the window of her home.

The elderly woman was shot down Wednesday night as she washed dishes in her home at McHenry, 14 miles north of here.

State's Attorney Neil C. Fraley at first was inclined toward robbery as a motive for the crime, but discarded that after a preliminary investigation conducted by himself and Sheriff Clarence Spear. He said promissory notes ranging from $25 to $2,500 each were found in her home.

Funeral services for Miss Pysell will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at Hoyes Methodist Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Flatwoods Cemetery.

'Little Heiskell' to Stay At City Hall—in Glass

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 8.—"Little Heiskel," the little tin soldier "patron saint" of Hagerstown, is to remain at City Hall, but in a glass case, the Mayor and Council decided last night. The tin soldier has served as a weather vane over City Hall for a century and a half, but was so badly battered by the elements that it was decided last night that a copper replica should replace him there.

There has been some talk of consigning the original "Little Heiskell" to the Washington County Mesuem of Fine Arts, but Councilman C. L. Lushbaugh expressed the sentiment of the City Fathers when he said: "He's been with us for over 150 years and I think he ought to stay here."

Nice Commutes Death Sentence Of Utley to Life

Appeals Court Was Split, 4 to 4, in Baltimore Holdup Slaying.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 8.—Morris T. Utley, the former hospital orderly whose death sentence for murder was upheld by a four-to-four opinion of the Court of Appeals, will not hang for the killing of a Baltimorean in a store holdup.

Instead, he faces life imprisonment. Gov. Harry W. Nice announced today that he had commuted Utley's sentence. In granting the commutation, the Governor added:

"No succeeding Governor should, under the facts in this case, further interfere with the administration of the law in the matter of State vs. Utley. His life sentence should be actually a life sentence, without any later parole or pardon."

Utley's case centered about his claim that he is not mentally responsible. The Baltimore court, however, convicted him and passed the death sentence. He entered notice of appeal to the Court of Appeals, which was divided evenly, and, under the Maryland law, such a decision upholds the lower court.

It was the first time in history that the highest court of the State had divided on a death case.

Utley killed Charles F. Schimunek in the holdup last February 11. One month later he was sentenced to die.

In announcing the commutation, the Governor also said:

"I cannot, of course, free this man through any action of mine, and yet, at the same time, I cannot hurl into eternity a human soul with the eight judges comprising our highest court divided on the question of a new trial. This creates the legal doubt to which I must give recognition, and the only action left me is that of commutation to life imprisonment."

Staunton Bank Cashier Found Shot to Death

Staunton, Va., Nov. 8 (AP).—W. Roscoe Dudley, about 40, Staunton bank cashier, died today from a bullet wound in the head which Coroner T. M. Parkins said he learned was self-inflicted.

Dudley was found mortally wounded in a room in the rear of the bank building. A gun, usually kept in the cashier's cage, was found by his side.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 8.—Students at several Virginia schools and colleges today dropped classes for brief periods to participate in programs against militarism as a part of the annual nation-wide observance of anti-war day.

About 500 Washington and Lee students gathered in a peace assembly in Lee Chapel to hear Dr. Francis P. Gaines, president of the university, declare that lasting peace will not come through neutrality measures nor preparedness, but through a concerted movement against war in all countries of the world, especially by students of the countries.

Joe Arnold, W. and L. football player, and George Boyd, president of the university's International Relations Club, also made short talks. Amos Bolen, student body president, presided.

The assembly remained silent one minute in tribute to those who died in the World War. Classes were dismissed for one-half hour for the gathering.

Francis P. Miller, chairman of the World Student Christian Federation, speaking at the anti-war rally at the University of Virginia, made a plea for United States participation in international peace efforts.

Walter S. Rodman, dean of the department of engineering, was the faculty speaker on the program, while the student speakers were P. Fowlkes, William Leonard and John Watts. Warren M. Ballard, president of the student senate, presided over the meeting, which was sponsored by 16 student organizations.

The men and women of the University of Richmond held a meeting in the Cannon Memorial chapel to hear anti-war speeches by Dr. B. C. Holtzclaw, Dr. Maude Woolford, Dr. Rolvix Harlan and two students. There was no interruption in classes.

Peery Orders Investigation Of ABC Law

Tells Advisers to Offer Any Changes They Deem Necessary.

Board Already Has Proposed 13 Administrative Suggestions.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 8.—Gov. Peery today added to the duties of his advisory legislative council a request for a study of the alcoholic beverage control act of 1934 and a report upon any amendments it might consider necessary.

Council members said the Governor had given them one of their biggest jobs since organization.

The ABC board has offered 13 administrative suggestions, and in addition there will be several measures of policy which have highly controversial elements. These include whether or not hotels and restaurants should be permitted to sell mixed drinks containing spirits and cordials as well as wine.

The recommendations of the ABC board include that:

Collection of excise taxes on all beer and issuance of licenses for all alcoholic beverages, including 3.2 beer, be put under jurisdiction of the board;

License provisions be broadened to provide beer on premises, beer off premises and beer off and on premises; wine licenses to be divided similarly; and that other licensing provisions be enacted clarifying the present sections;

Failure of persons to answer a summons of the board be made punishable;

Hagerstown Scene Of Nutrition Study

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 8.—An individual survey of the effects of the depression upon the nutrition and physical development of 10,000 Hagerstown school children is under way here, under the direction of Dr. A. E. Russell, surgeon of the United States Public Health Service, Washington, and an assistant, Miss Elizabeth Bell.

Children in two local schools have been physically examined and work has been started in the third school. It was found that children of one school who have been receiving less nutritious food are stronger and better developed than children in another school where they received a wider variety of foods.

The health survey is being done by the Federal Government and all data are turned over to the local health department, and parents are notified of any physical defects that can be corrected. If they are not able to have this done, the health department will do it. The survey will be completed about January 1.

Medical Writer Dead

DR. SAMUEL M. WAGAMAN.

Wagaman Rites Set Tomorrow At Hagerstown

Retired Physician Was 62, Publisher of Writings on Medicine.

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 8.—Funeral services will be held here at 3 p. m. Sunday, for Dr. Samuel W. Wagamen, 62, retired phsician, editor and publisher of medical publications, who died at his home here today.

Dr. Wagaman's death resulted from heart disease, suffered following an illness of two months.

He was in active practice here for 20 years and later became president of a medical book publishing concern, but severed his relations with it in 1930.

He then organized the Mitchell Corporation, publishers of the current medical digest and was editor of that organ until his death.

Dr. Wagaman was a graduate of St. John's College in Annapolis and of the medical school of the University of Pennsylvania.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Anne K. Wagaman; two daughters, Mrs. Richard C. Willson and Mrs. Walter McPhail; two sons, James M. Wagaman and S. Mitchell Wagaman, jh., all of Hagerstown; two brothers, Judge Frank G. Wagaman and John E. Wagaman, and one sister, Mrs. Charles T. Funk.

Wesley J. Humphries.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 8.—Funeral services for Wesley J. Humphries, 88, well known Albermarle County farmer and Confederate veteran, who died at his home, Hill-and-Dale, near Crozet, were held this afternoon at Mount Plain Baptist Church. Interment was in the church burial ground.

During the Civil War he served with a company under command of Capt. William B. Mallory. He was a member of the John Bowie Strange Camp, C. V., and for years was a familiar figure at Confederate reunions.

Besides the widow, the following children by a first wife survive: George Mace, of Grottoes; Mrs. Bernard Walton and Miss Sallie Mallow, of this county, and J. L. Humphreys, of Crozet. There are 22 grandchildren and 19 great-grandchildren.

Dr. Holloway Is Appointed College Head

Western Maryland Board Elects Westminster School Executive.

37-Year-Old Alumnus Chosen to Succeed Dr. A. N. Ross.

By the Associated Press.

Westminster, Md., Nov. 9.—Dr. Fred G. Holloway, for the past three years president of Westminster Theological Seminary, today was named president of Western Maryland College. He succeeds Dr. A. Norman Ward, who died September 22.

Dr. Ward, who had been president of the Methodist Protestant Institution for 15 years, died unexpectedly. He collapsed while delivering a sermon at a church in Harford County.

Dr. Holloway's election was announced by the board of trustees which met here today to consider recommendations of a sub-committee named to study presidential candidates.

Governors to Choose.

The election of a successor to Dr. Holloway as president of the seminary will be in the hands of the board of governors of that institution. Dr. J. M. Gill, Baltimore, is president of the board.

Dr. Holloway, a native of Newark, N. J., is 37 years old. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Holloway, of Newark.

He was graduated from Western Maryland in 1918 and later attended Westminster Theological Seminary and Drew University. He received his B. D. degree from Western Maryland in 1932.

Was at Texas, Md.

During his student days at the seminary, he had a charge at a church in Texas, Md. His first charge following his installation as a minister in Newark in 1921 was in Wilmington, Del.

Dr. Holloway went to Wilton Heights Church in Baltimore in 1923, going from there to Cherrydale, Va., in 1926. He came to the seminary in 1929 as a teacher of Biblical languages and was named president of the institution in 1932, succeeding Dr. H. L. Elderdice, who became president emeritus.

Dr. Holloway was married April 12, 1923, in Newark to Miss Winifred M. Jackson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Jackson, of Newark. They have two sons, Fred, jr., and William.

Board Defers Study of Major Welfare Plans

Adopts 2 Recommendations in First Sessions Since 2 Quit.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 8.—The State Board of Welfare decided today to carry out two of the recommendations in the survey commission's report, but deferred a study of the critical portions of the report until the next meeting.

The meeting was the first since two members of the board resigned, charging that the body had bowed to political pressure in making an appointment. Mrs. Ethel Mae Lauterbach, of Mount Airy, Md., one of the members appointed in place of those who resigned, was present at her first session today.

The survey commission's report, made public several weeks ago, criticized some conditions at the House of Correction, and suggested that some unused workshops be converted into dormitories and nearby scrub land cleared for farming.

The board voted to convert the workshops as soon as money is available, and revealed that it usually has a force of men at work clearing the scrub during the winter. Charles J. Butler, chairman of the board, said that discussion of all the commission's report was deferred because all the board members were not present.

The board voted to demolish three old machinery and storage sheds near the institution and erect one new one on a different site.

Sister States Lead Virginia In Aid Costs

Comparison With Nearby Commonwealths Shows It Lowest.

By the Associated Press.

University, Va., Nov. 8.—Virginia expenditures for relief and the per cent of her population receiving relief has been less than those in any of her adjoining States since the end of CWA activities on March 31, 1934, according to a survey by Leland B. Tate published today in the University News Letter.

"Average monthly expenditures have been approximately $1,055,000 in Virginia, as compared with approximately $1,521,000 in North Carolina, $1,620,000 in Tennessee, $1,589,000 in Kentucky, $1,950,000 in West Virginia and $1,691,000 in Maryland," Tate said.

"Persons receiving relief in Virginia from April, 1934, through July, 1935, have constituted a monthly average of 8 per cent of the total population of the State. This percentage of population receiving relief is from one-fifth to almost two-thirds lower than the per cent of population receiving relief in adjoining States during the same period, and only a little more than half the average for the United States.

West Virginia was first among the States compared, with approximately 21 per cent of her population receiving relief for the 16-month period, Kentucky was next with 18 per cent, Tennessee was third with 13 per cent, Maryland was fourth with 11 per cent and North Carolina, with 10 per cent, ranked 2 per cent above Virginia."

Tate listed among the factors responsible for the difference "Virginia's more conservative relief program; her larger rural population and her lower wage rates on work relief projects, based largely on the prevailing rates for similar work throughout the State."

Crash Is Fatal To Motorcyclist

Companion Receives Cuts and Bruises.

By the Associated Press.

His companion, George Kuhet, 20, of St. Marys City, suffered cuts and bruises.

The accident occurred as the two youths were returning from St. Marys City late last night. A tire on the motorcycle blew out, throwing Conly onto the pavement.

Dr. C. A. Brown, who lives nearby, heard the crash and went to the scene. State police later took the boys to the St. Marys County Hospital, where Conly died.

Keeps Right On Picking Upsets And More Upsets

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—So they're paying college football players again. Shocking! I have a wonderful and illuminating editorial in my system on the subject which I know would be most instructive to you all, but I am going to permit it to stay there. We have more important business at hand this day, my hearties. It's Saturday, and millions of people the country over are palpitating to know what old Swami Gallico, the Seer of Forty-second street, has found in the little crystal ball this week. Abracadabra, Mumbo Jumbo. Old Daddy Upset stay 'way from mah door.

No hot tips this week like that Mississippi State-Army thing, unless you like my hunch on Iowa with Oze Simmons to beat the undefeated Minnesota team. Just pure hunch and nothing more.

I'm worried about that Notre Dame-Northwestern game. I've picked Notre Dame, because I wouldn't pick against a team with that much guts and spirit if they were playing seven professional teams on seven successive days. But there must be a let down after last Saturday's magnificent effort. The spark plugs of the team are injured. Northwestern has nothing to lose and everything to gain. All the tension and worry is on the unbeaten South Bend squad. It would be a pity to have their season spoiled by a team that wasn't going anywhere in particular. Come on, Notre Dame, take this one. . . .

Let's see, upsets . . . Any more upsets? My picking Illinois to beat Michigan, 13 to 0, seems to be something of the kind. And for some reason I have tagged Penn State to beat Villanova, and Georgia Tech to take Alabama Poly (Auburn—they still haven't made up their minds). I must be just plain dumb. Consensus of intelligent opinion runs the other way. The other guys must be right. Those picks are just plain dopey. Well, that's my privilege. Anyway, I'm not kidding anyone.

Columbia to beat Syracuse. 'Most everyone picks Syracuse. Don't know much about the Syracuse team, but Columbia just can't go on being Patsy, and giving the parties. They have good material there, and Lou Little is a fine coach and he must have been greatly annoyed at having been tied by Cornell. And, after all, the team did play Michigan off its feet after the damage had been done. No, I'll have to take alma mater on that one. I gave Syracuse one touchdown.

Army to beat Pittsburgh. That's the closest I come to knowing something. That visit to West Point last Wednesday helped. Found out that a lot of Army players who have been just so-so this season will be ready and rarin' to go for this one. And that Mississippi State thing did hurt. The boys are full of pizen. Kopczac, or however you spell it, is one of them. And there's a new back they brought up from the "B" Squad who ran wild in some jayvee game up there who may turn into the star Army ball carrier, a little light kid. The day I saw them Army was getting a dose of fundamentals, particularly tackling practice on live ball carriers—Army, 13; Pitt, 7. Thank you.

The rest I guess is form, and not particularly interesting. Stanford should certainly beat Southern California if form means anything. Holy Cross seems to have more strength and drive than Carnegie Tech. Princeton stands 'way out above Harvard and not even a dope would care to risk Harvard pulling an upset there. On last week's performance, Mississippi State is my choice over Louisiana State, but that isn't in the bag at all. Pennsylvania should have no trouble with Navy, which seems to have too tough a schedule against big guys. They MIGHT bounce back against Penn, but I doubt it. Tulane seems to be the class over Georgia, after licking Colgate, and I prefer Purdue to Wisconsin.

Almost forgot the game I'm covering—Fordham-St. Mary's. In spite of all the publicity the St. Mary's team has had since arriving here, I'll pick 'em. St. Mary's, 19; Fordham, 7. That's always a grand game to watch. It doesn't mean much in the national records, but how those guys do smack one another That's done it.

Academy Golf Club Is Headed by Giffen

Director of Athletics Assumes New Links Duties.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 8.—Capt. Robert C. Giffen, director of athletics at the Naval Academy, today was elected president of the Academy Golf Club for the ensuing term.

Lieut. Ralph B. Hunt was chosen secretary-treasurer of the organization, which also selected a greens committee, a tournament committee and a house committee.

Capt. J. B. Pollard, club champion, and Lieuts. Charles O. Humphries and David L. Nutter comprise the greens group. The tournament committee chosen was Lieut. Comdr. C. C. Miller, chairman; Junior Lieuts. C. J. Pungstag and W. S. Pyle, jr., and Mrs. G. D. Dickey.

Commander L. T. Dubois, chairman, and Mrs. J. H. Newton, wife of Capt. Newton, comprise the house committee selected.

On Tuesday the club will hold a hole-in-one contest, open only to members. It will be held on No. 9 hole so that players may be seen from the club veranda.

By John R. Vosburgh.

ALTHOUGH precautions were taken not to run up too big a score, Central High found itself giving Roosevelt its annual trouncing yesterday. Coach Hardy Pearce, of Central, used 34 players, but was unable to keep the score any lower than 32 to 2.

Some 2,500 spectators at Central Stadium watched the Mount Pleasanters, led by the irrepressible Billy Richardson and Quarterback Bill Vermillion, romp to their third straight interhigh victory.

The game was somewhat notable in that Roosevelt actually broke into the scoring column. Althought they never got closer than 40 yards to the Central goal line, the Rough Riders managed to score their first points of the series when they tallied a safety in the second quarter. Central had a hand in this scoring move, however, helping matters greatly by a bad pass from center to set the stage for the two-pointer.

Vermillin Scores Twice.

Richardson, Central's chief ground-gainer, shared the ball-arrying burden with Vermillion, who scored two of the five touchdowns, making a pretty 20-yard run for one of them and leading up to another with a 25-yard jaunt featuring a fine display of cutting, change of pace and reversing his field. The Roosevelt offensive consisted mostly of attempted passes rather poorly thrown by Francis Beamer. The Rough Riders were unable to make a first down.

Richardsn set about pening the touchdown parade in the first few minutes of play. Roosevelt received the kick-off and on the second play of the game, the tony Central fullback intercepte da pass by Grant on his own 44. On the next play he skipped 14 yards, and on the next he slipped to a first down on the 19-yard line and finally went over from the 4-yard line. The touchdown came six plays after the interception and Richardson carried the ball on five of them.

Punt Partially Blocked.

Paul Whedon, Central end, partially blocked a kick by Beamer shortly afterward as he attempted to punt from his 20-yard line, and Charlie Jones, of Central, caught the ball on the 34. Vermillion and Jones took the leather o the 20-yard line, where Vermillion cut through left tackle, reversed his field and side-stepped three Roosevelt backs for the touchdown.

Early in the second quarter Coach Pearce began rushing in substitutes. Perhaps mindfull of the unseemly 95-to-0 defeat Central gave Roosevelt in 1933, Principal Harvey A. Smith, of Central, had come down on the field and talked with Pearce after the second touchdown.

Cage Loop Is Formed In Eastern Panhandle

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 8.—The Eastern Panhandle Basketball League, including every high school in the area, Morgan, Jefferson and Berkeley Counties, was formed at a meeting here last night.

Howard Beck, of Hedgesville High, was named president, and Cletus Lowe, of Shepherstown High, secretary-treasurer. Schedules were tentatively set and will not be published until checked.

Havana Bout Slated For Brown Bomber

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 8.—It looks like a busy winter for Joe Louis, the Detroit "Brown Bomber," who isn't happy unless he can crawl into a prize ring at least once every two months.

Another engagement was added to his growing list today when Mike Jacobs, New York promoter, who has the Negro sensation under a long-term contract, agreed to take Louis to Havana for a match with Isidor Gastanaga, the Spaniard, on December 29.

The agreement came after two days of negotiations with Sam Tolon, Cuban promoter, who predicts Louis will draw a $100,000 gate in the Cuban capital. The bout will be held in Tropical Park, the largest Havana ball park.

Crippled C. U. Team Faces Wesleyan

Half-Dozen Regulars Off Starting Line-up for Stadium Game.

RIDDLED by injuries that have removed a half-dozen regulars from the starting line-up, but still a cocky, powerful crew capable of battling with the best of them, Catholic University faces West Virginia Wesleyan this afternoon at Griffith Stadium in a game that marks the beginning of a stretch drive for the Brooklanders. The kick-off is scheduled for 2 o'clock.

Capt. Ed Karpowich, Hermie Schmarr and "Yan" Yanchulis, linemen, "Irish" Carroll, Bill Adamitis and Bob Makofske, backs, will see the opening kick-off from the players' bench. Some may get into action later in the fray, but Schmarr, an end, and Carroll, the team's smoothest halfback, are definitely out with a twisted ankle and broken ribs, respectively.

New Air Triumvirate.

To meet the emergency Coach "Dutch" Bergman has sent Fred Rydewski to Schmar's flank position, and turned Adamaitis' duties over to capable "Dixie" Walker, thus creating a new passing triumvirate. Walker is Adamaitis' equal at running the ball and just a trifle below him in passing. Not quite as accurate as his predecessor, he can throw 'em a mile, and as long as Georgie Mulligan is playing that's all he has to do.

Catholic's attack will be built around Walker and "Spec" Foley, sophomore punting star, who won the quarterback assignment from Pete Dranginis. Foley punts so high they come down with icicles on them, and if the Cardinals' running and passing attack fails the team's salvation depends on his good right foot. It hasn't failed thus far.

Beaten Only Once.

Wesleyan comes to town fresh from its 12-6 victory over Davis-Elkins and defeated only once this season. A scoreless tie with West Virginia and 7-0 decision over Xavier are the brightest spots on its record.

In Len Barnum, last of three brothers who made football history at Pitt and West Virginia, the Bobcats have one of the East's outstanding backs. He is a triple-threater and adept at kicking field goals. But Nelson Peterson, spindle-legged halfback, is the team's most dangerous threat. He ranked eighth on the national scoring list last season and is gunning for similar honors this year.

18-to-0 Beating Given Bullis By Devitt

By George Considine.

ONE Adam (Red) Zinkievich, of the Worcester Zinkieviches and currently of the Devitt Prep Zinkieviches, was feeling sort of footballish yesterday at Roosevelt Stadium and as an immediate result Devitt swept to an impressive 18-to-0 victory over Bullis Prep before about 1,000 shivering spectators. The gentleman in question accounted for all the scoring.

Following Devitt's opening kickoff, Ed Thomas recovered a Bullis fumble in midfield. Little Len Askin, who starred throughout the game on the defensive, started the parade goalward, depositing the leather on Bullis' 28. On the next play Kinkievich took the ball, tried to gain, got into trouble and then, away off balance, pegged a beautiful pass to Askin, who was downed on the 18.

Way up in the press section, you could feel that the big, sandy-haired kid from New England was football class in person. Zink received the ball from center, got down in the manner of a 100-yard-dash man, shot through tackle and, once past the line of scrimmage, was simply unstoppable. Having scored, Kinkievich attempted a pass to Askin for the extra point, but it was intercepted.

The second half had barely gotten under way when the same Zinkievich went into action. Starting on Devitt's 35, he conducted one of the most thrilling one-man marches of the season—a march, which stopped momentarily on the 50, the 30, the 12, the 9 and finally somewhere in Bullis' end zone. The parade was made possible by the splendid work of Askin, Bill Paterson, Paul Dietrich and Rube Hayman.

After more than a period of seesawing in midfield Zinkievich again bobbed up with a spectacular run from Bullis' 39 to the 14. Len Askin then took the pigskin, but was halted at the line of scrimmage. A plunge off tackle by Zinkievich netted 3 yards to advance to the 6-yard line. Need we mention that it was Zinkievich, who scored around left end on the next play? Clark smeared Zink's try for the extra point.

Key Ineligible, Uclans' Small Squad Left With One Fullback

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 8.—The supply of fullbacks at the University of California at Los Angeles was reduced tonight to one—no more no less—with Clois Francis Key ruled ineligible by his confession that he is not R. F. (Ted) Key, the name he used in registration.

Key's confession yesterday had no effect on Coach Bill Spaulding's preparations for a game with Southern Methodist University here Monday. The big Texan had been "in seclusion" since his last appearance in a Bruin uniform a week ago.

Alt Schell, who alternated with Key in the fullback position, automatically moved into first place with the disqualification, but Schell stands alone as principal—with no alternate in sight.

"We'll have to make some other arrangements and not much time left in which to do the trick," said Spaulding, a big, good natured and very popular football coach, who said he never dreamed his best fullback was a "ringer."

"We'll have to do the best we can. At the moment I don't know what shifts we can make. Schell will, of course, start at fullback."

There was a possibility Spaulding might put on another doubling-in-brass act by having the rugged quarterback, Bill Murphy, take a turn at fullbacking in addition to his quarterback duties. Don Ferguson, a very light but fast halfback, in that case would be converted into a substitute quarterback. Remington Olmstead, a good substitute quarter and full, is suffering from injuries.

The U. C. L. A. squad is the smallest of the major teams in the Pacific Coast Conference and half a dozen men of the first string play two or more positions. In two of its three home games the visiting team has had more men in uniform than the home guard.

Chuck Cheshire, fast-running back; Fred Funk, blocking back and kicker extraordinary, and Murphy, fast-thinking quarterback, enlist for the duration of the football war when they start. This enlistment is apt to be "from now on" when the Armistice Day game starts with the clever Mustangs from Dallas.

Cardozo Defeated By Dunbar, 7 to 0

Wells, who had gone in for Ford at quarterback, intercepted one of Mitchell's passes over the line in the second period, and galloped 50 yards down the field for a touchdown standing up. Gordon placekicked the extra point.

It was the goal which gave the Dunbarites their first victory of the season, and a leg-up on the colored high school city championship. As Armstrong, now undefeated, is expected to win from Cardozo on the eighteenth, at Walker Stadium, the victory yesterday made it apparent that the final championship clash will be between the ancient rivals, Dunbar and Armstrong, on the twenty-fifth, with the latter the decided favorite.

Terps Renew Series With Indianans

Will Rely on Air Attack; 20,000 to See Game in Baltimore.

WITH both sides claiming huge pre-game losses and clamoring like a pack of hungry wolfhounds for the underdogs' role, Maryland and Indiana renew their young rivalry this afternoon at Baltimore in an intersectional fray expected to attract 20,000 fans.

Always late in attaining its peak, Maryland appears ready for its best performance of the season. The loss of Bill Andorka, regular center, and Al Farrell, reserve tackle, retarded the squad's progress, but with their places satisfactorily filled by Frank DeArmey and Charlie Callahan, respectively, the Old Liners have regained their stride.

Vic Willis, the young Eiffel Tower, who shone brilliantly against the Hoosiers last year when Maryland lost a 17-14 decision in a thriller, and Jack Stonebraker, one of the squad's most elusive ball carriers, were reported slightly disabled yesterday and were not listed in the starting line-up. But, just as the Terps scouted stories of Indiana injuries as "b'ar meat," so the Mid-Westerners pooh-pdoh Maryland's tale of woe.

Three Definitely Lost.

Chris Dal Sasso, tackle, and Rip Heistand and Dale Tanner, sophomore halfbacks, are definitely lost to Indiana for the fray because of injuries, but as long as Wendel Walker and Reed Kelso are functioning the Old Line will have enough opposition to contend with. Walker scored both touchdowns for his school in the 1934 game, Kelso added the extra points and later booted the winning field goal.

Maryland may avail itself of the talents of two sophomore backs for the first time this season if Bill Bryant and Waverly Wheeler are used. Both have been applying themselves to their football catechisms on the sidelines thus far, playing all of their games during the week in scrimmages with the scrubs. But both have shown marked ability lugging the leather, particularly Wheeler, who is fast and extraordinarily shifty.

Air Attack Planned.

Much of Maryland's attack will be charted through the air, with Willis playing a leading role. Indiana failed to stop his pass receiving last year and he got away for severable sizable gains and was on the dispatching end of numerous effective laterals.

But the entire offense will not be built around Willis, not with Bill Guckeyson, Coleman Headley, Charlie Ellinger and Stonebraker, all efficient ball carirers, ready for service. All constitute a threat to Indiana supremacy.

Fresh from its 6-to-6 tie with Iowa and apparently attaining its own peak, Indiana will show a well-balanced offense with much of the deception for which "Bo" McMillin, its coach, is famous. The Hoosiers will employ a five-man backfield, hidden ball play, and quadruple lateral off of a forward pass. They will be a slight favorite at the kick-off, which is scheduled for 2 o'clock.

Burnett's 67 Tops Crook, 5 and 3

By Dave Herman.

RESPONDING to a five-alarm call from Old Man Par, Volney Burnett, the District firefighter, shot a red-hot 67 yesterday to defeat Jack Crook, former Cincinnati golf star, 5 and 3, and advance to the semifinals of the Rock Creek turkey tournament.

Crook, a professional of some renown years ago, was unable to match the withering fire of pars and birdies which fell from Burnett's blazing sticks. Burnett took an early lead, was 2 up at the turn. His 67, 1 under par, is one of the lowest rounds ever scored in match play in a tournament at Rock Creek.

T. Gibraski, another professional challenger, scored a 70 in eliminating Bob Marks, 3 and 1, in a first-round match. Marks, starting 4-3-3-4-2, went 1 up on Gibraski, but the pro squared the battle at the turn.

Ends Match With Par.

Gibraski won the tenth and fourteenth holes and settled the issue with a par 3 on the short seventeenth. Marks put up a stubborn fight. He shot a 75.

In another first-round match, Ben Kong, former Hawaiian champion, a student at George Washington University, put out Charlie Beall, one-time Randolph-Macon athlete, 3 and 1. They played the last few holes in near darkness.

Kong will meet Levi Yoder, Indian Spring star, in his next match, and Gibraski will oppose W. H. Miller.

Nick Altrock is to face the winner of the L. D. Byers-J. L. Andstead match.

Results:

First Flight.

T. Gibraski defeated Bob Marks, 3 and 1; Ben Kong defeated Charlie Beall, 3 and 1.

Second Flight.

Hampton Hadley defeated H. C. Turner, 2 and 1; Bob Leapley defeated K. O. Hill, 8 and 6; J. S. Beckham defeated R. E. Greene, 5 and 4; Pat Axtell defeated C. J. Berry, 8 and 7.

Dave Herman defeated Marcos Chaconas, 5 and 4; Don Sullivan defeated H. Abrams, 2 up; C. J. Williams defeated Bill Leapley, 3 and 2; T. W. Cain defeated R. Heffernan, 2 and 1.

Fourth Flight.

R. M. Roudabush defeated Allen Hagerty, 1 up, 19 holes; J. C. McGrew defeated G. P. Gibbs, 3 and 2; J. S. Walsmith defeated H. C. Heasner, 1 up; T. Fahs defeated A. Del Vecchio, 4 and 3.

Women's Flight.

Mrs. Mae Hill defeated Mrs. W. F. Gemmell, 2 and 1; Mrs. Florence Godfrey defeated Ruth Hagerty, 7 and 5.

Dr. Noah Pomeroy defeated H. S. Kimball, 1-up in a stirring 20-hole match for the senior golf championship at Kenwood yesterday. Pomeroy sank a 12-footer for a half on the nineteenth and a 20-footer for a four and win on the 20th.

Helen Dettweiler and Mrs. W. L. Rice tied for low net honors in the best ball handicap tournament at Congressional. Mrs. J. J. McCarthy and Mrs. Larry Otell tied for second. Mrs. R. E. Burke and Mrs. Harvey Cobb tied for the prize for making the least number of putts.

General Mitchell Enters Dogs in Fauquier Trials

By George Trevor,

Nationally Known Football Authority.

FOUNDED in 1860 as a military school with Gen. Bill Sherman as its first superintendent, Louisiana State sent its first graduates into conspicuous roles with the Confederate Armies. The Tigers of the Bayous had played football since the 90's but they reached the pinnacle during the regime of Biff Jones in 1932-33.

It is almost impossible to choose between Tom Dutton and John Kent for all-time L. S. U. center. Dutton, a towering shot putter, starred on a post-Armistice team of 1919. Many Baton Rouge observers prefer Kent who snapped the ball for the 1932 Southern Conference champinos. He had the wider lateral range though less driving power.

Norborne Wilson weighed 213 pounds yet carried it so speedily that he was sometimes shifted from guard to end. Orren Babe Norblett was the key man in the memorable 1908 line, playing offensive tackle and defensive guard. Carrying the ball on the tackle-over-tackle play he averaged 9 yards in ten successive plunges against Auburn that season in the game that decided the Southern title. Coach Biff Jones considered Roy Wilson one of the hardest running guards he ever coached.

Jack Torrance, the man-Mountain from Oak Grove, might have been the greatest lineman American football has known had he possessed a more aggressive tempersment. This good-natured, easy-going behemoth weighted 275 pounds and stood 6 feet 4 inches tall, yet was nimble enough to break the World's record in the shot put—an event which requires agility as well as sheer strength. Torrance had such unusual speed for his size that he played end one year and by reason of his basketball skill became a good pass receiver.

Justin Rukas was not a showy type of tackle but he did 60 minutes worth of damage in every game. Jess Tinsley, now a professional star with the Chicago Cardinals, developed into a master tackle in senior year.

The South has had few ends to rival Bill Seip, giant wingman of the 1908 steam-roller. This spartan broke his arm in scrimmage before the final contest with Tulane, but insisted on playing with his arm in a cast. He lasted the entire game and held off the Greenies with one arm. Ray Edmonds beat Tulane in 1920 with his consistent catches of flat tosses. Going down under

Exhibit, $35.30 Shot, Leads All Way to Triumph at Pimlico

Official Runs Second by Length

Black Buddy Is Third; $252.20 Is Paid by Daily Double.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Md., Nov. 8. Exhibit, aptly named son of Display, gave a speed exhibition that startled some 8,000 customers at this turf establishment this afternoon. Breaking on top of his field from No. 1 post position, the 3-year-old colt had his rivals in his wake from start to finish over the 1-mile-and-70-yard course. By the decisive margin of a length, Sammy Renick brought the $35.30 shot to the wire ahead of the favored Official. Apprentice saved third money from Black Buddy by a head.

The list of "also rans" included Commonwealth, Walter M. Jeffords' 1935 Kentucky Derby hope; Our Reigh, Morpluck and others prominent in the records.

The race was run over a heavy but drying-out track, and Exhibit was clocked in 1:48 1-5, despite the fact that he was forced to run the first half mile on the inside in the heaviest going.

Double Pays $252.20.

The daily double brought a small fortune to the backers of Carp and Pepper Patch. Those who played the combine collected at the rate of $252.20 for each $2 investment.

To return to the feature, it was all Exhibit. Our Reigh made persistent effort to dislodge the flying leader, but ran himself into submission. Official challenged sharply entering the stretch, but he was shaken off. Apprentice saved ground at the stretch turn, but he was held safe. Commonwealth did a lot of futile running after the issue was decided. It was all Exhibit.

Carp, a first-time starting daughter of Tarpaulin and backed by the all-Washington combination of Selby Burch, trainer and owner, and Jimmy Sullivan, jockey, scored an easy victory in the day's opening event for maidens. Carp was rated along behind the pace of Starry Night and took command at the far turn to win with speed to spare. Hot Griddle closed a gap to be second and Starry Night lasted long enough to be third. Carp was well played at a $7 mutuel.

Mishaps in Steeplechase.

An odds-on favorite, Hurry Harry, won the jumping race with the greatest of ease, thanks to a series of mishaps. Jockey F. Bellhouse was pulling up the F. Ambrose Clark representative nearing the finish. Black Feather, a 90-1 shot, was second, and Postman Home was third. Only two others of the eight starters finished. Fast Chance fell at the seventh jump after Ibnita had lost rider at the fourth fence. Capstan added to his reputation as a "runner out" by running away from the course going to the eighth brush while in front. Hurry Harry was under wraps for one swing of the field, but with something happening to his most serious rivals, he had no opposition thereafter. The jockeys escaped injuries.

Hurry Harry paid a $3.20 mutuel.

Pepper Patch, by the mud-running Scotch Broom, came out of the pack in the stretch to win the third race at an $18.40 mutuel. Masked Gal and Joan D, were seeing and third in the 6 furlong sprint. Jockey Les Fallon kept Pepper Patch out of trouble and then drove him along at the end to draw out on Masked Gal.

Long Shot Wins.

Furled Flag, a Charles Town performer last summer, was given a million-dollar ride as he won the fourth race. Wayne Wright had the mount and he drew Furled Flag to wait when the pace was too fast. Nearing the finish he brought the son of American Flag between horses to win going away. Idle Flirt, prominent all the way, was second and Brad was third. The winner paid $38.

Darkling, a $4.90 favorite, scored a thrilling nose decision over Old Judge in the fifth race, with third money going to Apathy. The daughter of Macaw had to work her way to the leaders and finished with a rush under Jockey Coucci's punishing ride to be up in the final strides.

Lovely Girl brought hte favorite players more reason to smile in the sixth race, coming up on the outside of High Pool and Wha Hae to score with daylight to spare. She was heavily played at a $4.60 mutuel.

Stimulator, paying $23.80 won the last race. Don Romiro was second and Venitian third.

Celanese, South End In 0-0 Soccer Game

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 8.—The Celanese Spinners and South End battled to a scoreless tie in an Allegany County Soccer League contest played on Celanese Field. Morton had a chance to score for the Spinners five minutes before the final whistle, but missed his try for a penalty goal.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CARP, $7.00, $3.10, $4.80. HOT GRIDDLE, $4.40, $3.50. STARRY NIGHT, $4.60.

CARP, away nicely and kept in closest pursuit of STARRY NIGHT, moved into a long lead after being shaken up at the stretch turn and held away until the end. HOT GRIDDLE permitted to gain his best stride, challenged gamely in the last five-sixteenths but could not menace the winner. STARRY NIGHT was rated nicely, saved ground all the way, but weakened in the late stages. ROCKY PRINCE closed a good gait from a slow beginning. BLACK RIBBON went forwardly placed but was not good enough when the real issue came. BULL FIGHTER could not threaten at any time. PORDINA had no mishaps. MINTIE was done early.

SECOND RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:02. Off at 2:03. Winner, P. A. Clark's br. g. (5), by Dan IV—Blue Pearl. Trained by E. G. Geither. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $100; fourth, 150. Time, 3:56. (13 jumps.)

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HURRY HARRY, $3.20, $2.90, $2.80; BLACK FEATHER, $22.90, $8.40; POSTMAN HOME, $3.20.

HURRY HARRY went into an easy lead at the eighth fence when CAPSTAN left the course, was steadied to all of his fences after drawing clear and had much in reserve at the end. BLACK FEATHER, prominent from the beginning and fencing well, failed to menace the winner when put to a hard drive. POSTMAN HOME, reserved for the first mile, gained a forward position when shaken up, but was held safe when the real test came. DUNDRILLIN was always far back. FAIRY LORE was never a factor. CAPSTAN ran out at the eighth fence. FAST CHANCE lost his rider at the seventh jump. IBNITA lost his rider at the fourth fence.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900. For 2-year-old fillies; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:33. Off at 2:36. Winner, Mrs. J. H. Elliott's ch. f. (2), by Scotch Broom—Pepper Pot. Trained by L. Taylor. Value to winner, $650; second, $160; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 3-5, 1:16 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PEPPER PATCH, $18.40, $7.30, $5.90. MASKED GAL, $4.50, $3.70. JOAN D., $6.20.

PEPPER PATCH, rushed hard in the early stages while racing on the outside, challenged strongly when nearing the home stretch and closing stubbornly was up in the last sixteenth. MASKED GAL raced ROLLING ALONG and GO NOW into submission to assume a short lead, saved ground and continued gamely. JOAN D., slow to settle in her stride, improved her position on the outside and closed stoutly. AURA was under strong handling but could not threaten. DIXIE DORA was kept on the inside and she tired in the deeper footing. ROLLING ALONG could not last, DELIGHT was outrun. GO NOW stopped badly after reaching the home stretch. The others were outrun.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $900. For 3-year-olds and upward. Claiming. Start good. Won driving. Place, same. Went to post at 3:06. Off at 3:08. Winner, C. Feltner's ch. g. (3), by American Flag—Comical II. Trained by C. M. Feltner. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:50, 1:15 2-5, 1:43 2-5, 1:57 4-5.

BARNEY SEXTON	112	4	2	1½	5½	8½	9	9	Trenchard	21.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FURLED FLAG, $38.00, $11.60, $7.10. IDLE FLIRT, $3.40, $2.80. BRAD, $4.00.

FURLED FLAG, taken under slight restraint in the early running, responded readily to engage the leaders in the last five-sixteenths, then closed in resolute fashion under strong handling and was up in the last 50 yards. IDLE FLIRT was hurried to the front after reaching the back stretch, shook off BRAD and continued with good courage for the closing drive. BRAD followed close up while saving ground and had on good courses. PENCADER swung wide into the home stretch after moving up sharply and was gaining steadily at the end. BENDER FIRST raced on his own courage and was unable to threaten seriously when steered to the inside for the final drive. THREE DAGGERS was held safe. KURDAIR stopped badly, as did BARNEY SEXTON.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $900. For 3-year-olds and upward. Claiming. Start good. Won driving. Place, same. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:34½. Winner, H. Neusteter's br. m. (5), by Macaw—Beaming. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $580; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 3-5, 1:15, 1:43, 1:57 1-5.

McDONALD H	108	1	8	9½	10½	10	10	Garrett	234.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARKLING, $4.90, $3.10, $2.60. OLD JUDGE, $2.90, $2.80. APATHY, $4.00.

DARKLING, racing closer up than usual, swung to the outside when moving into contention and closing resolutely under strong urging was up in the final strides. OLD JUDGE shook off REPEAL after six furlongs, saved ground and fought it out determinedly when placed to punishment. APATHY worked his way up gradually and came willingly under a hard drive. REPEAL forced a steady pace in the first seven furlongs then tired. CALORIC went well placed but was not good enough when the real test came. POST BRIGADE could not reach contention. CANIMAR was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900. Allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving. Place, same. Went to post at 4:03. Off at 4:06½. Winner, Bomar Stable's b. f. (2), by Vito—Loveliness. Trained by R. E. Pottis. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:49, 1:15.

HONOR BRIGHT	104	4	7	5½	7½	8	9	Litzenberger	200.45

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LOVELY GIRL, $4.60, $3.20, $2.30. HIGH POOL, $6.80, $3.10. WHA HAE, $3.00.

LOVELY GIRL, hustled into contending position, gained fast when put to a drive, wore the leaders down when straightened into the home stretch and held HIGH POOL safe in the end. HIGH POOL, going in slow time, was paralleled the second, then TORITA and WHA HAE and held on well when overtaken. WHA HAE moved up fast midway final turn, but hung all during the final drive after the winner bumped him entering the home stretch. TORITA was under strong handling and showed a good effort. CAPTAIN JINKS was racing gamely at the finish. GRAND KNIGHT was outrun. KEARSARGE had speed for a half mile. HONOR BRIGHT stopped.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:33. Off at 4:35. Winner, Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin's ch. c. (3), by Display—Rahee. Trained by R. Waldron. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:14 2-5, 1:41, 1:46 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EXHIBIT, $35.30, $8.50, $6.40; OFFICIAL, $3.20, $2.70; APPRENTICE, $5.90.

EXHIBIT, vigorously handled and rushed hard to gain command at the first turn, stalled off stiff contention in the first seven furlongs then OUR REIGH, responded instantly when placed to punishment after reaching the home stretch and, under severe urging, drew out slowly right at the end. OFFICIAL, rated close up early, made a bold bid when entering the home stretch, but hung after getting on almost even terms with the winner in the final drive. APPRENTICE, smooth and game, inside rounding the final turn, then finished gamely. BLACK BUDDY, forced to circle his field, handled his weight well and closed strong. OUR REIGH was used up early and tired. THORSON saved ground and had no mishaps. COMMONWEALTH was never a factor.

EIGHTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:02. Off at 5:04. Winner, J. McPherson's b. g. (6), by Stimulus—Malvina. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:14 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STIMULATOR, $23.80, $11.50, $7.30; DON ROMIRO, $9.80, $5.60; VENETIAN, $3.90.

STIMULATOR assumed command shortly after the start, withstood stiff contention from DON ROMIRO until straightened into the home stretch, then drew out in the public furlong when shaken up. DON ROMIRO forced a gruelling pace following the winner closely, but faltered during the final furlong. VENETIAN, far out of contention, circled his field to close with a bold rush. SANG FROID was kept out in the heavy footing but was unable to menace the leaders. SINGING HEART saved a lot of ground all during the running, but failed to improve her position. POSTPONEMENT went evenly. RED BADGE stopped.

Show Still Led By Michigan Woman

By the Associated Press.

The King, purchased for a reported price of $20,000 from Mrs. John R. Thompson, of Chicago, during the past year, turned back six other highly regarded midget single harness horses for Miss Dodge's seventh triumph. A few events later, Shalimar followed his more famous stablemate into the ring and chalked up No. 8 for the Michigan sportswoman as he paraded to the top of a field of single harness horses over 14.2 hands and not exceeding 15.2.

Charles T. Fisher's Dixiana Farm took over second place as saddle horses from the Lexington, Ky. stable accounted for two events and ran their owner's number of victories to five. All America was judged the best of the five-gatted stallions or geldings and Royal Irish took the prize as the best three-gaited saddle horse over 14.2 hands and not exceeding 15.

Ninth First Place.

Dixiana threatened Miss Dodge's supremacy when American Jane accounted for the third victory of the afternoon and the sizth of the show for the Kentucky stable but the Michigan Girl came right back to take her ninth first place when Reed Bridgefort drove Brapsfield Debonair and Potentilla to the front over two other harness tandems, horses over 14.2 hands.

R. C. Flanery, of Kansas, Ills., who annually dominates the roadster division showed the first and third best pairs of roadsters, The Illinois entry was split by the team shown by Dr. R. A. Kibb, jr., of Columbus, Ohio.

Virginia-W.&L. Tussle to Be Wide Open

Rampant Rivalry Flares at Homecoming Today in Lexington.

LEXINGTON, Va., Nov. 8.—Gridiron fans of the Old Dominion will turn their eyes to Lexington tomorrow when Washington and Lee and the University of Virginia meet on Wilson field in a homecoming day classic that promises to offer plenty in the way of excitement for spectators. The kick-off is set for 2:30.

Neither the Generals nor the Cavaliers have record to brag about this year, so observers pointed out today that the game tomorrow might well become one of those wide-open affairs with each team taking to the air in an effort to clinch the battle decisively.

Washington and Lee will be playing the second and last game of the season with an Old Dominion team and for Coach Tex Tilson's lads it will be either a "fairly successful season" if they win, or a "very bad" season if they lose.

Cavaliers Tricky.

Reports drifting to Lexington today from Charlottesville described the Cavaliers as far more capable than some of the scores against them indicate. Especially deceptive, the football-wise say, is an aerial attack they sometimes employ.

The Generals, following their two-title march last fall, have been unable to get under way this season, but against West Virginia, a heavy outfit, they looked exceptionally good until the latter part of the game, when numerous substitutions by the Mountaineers began to wear down the

Cotton Crop Estimate Drops Slightly Nov. 1

By the Associated Press.

A cotton crop of 11,141,000 bales of 500 pounds gross weight this year was reported yesterday by the Department of Agriculture as indicated from conditions November 1. Production of 11,464,000 bales was indicated a month ago. Last year's crop was 9,636,000 bales; the 1933 crop, 13,047,000 bales.

Ginnings from this year's crop prior to November 1 were reported by the Census Bureau to have totaled 7,749,635 running bales, counting round as half bales and exclusive of linters. Ginnings to that date a year ago were 7,917,671 bales; two years ago, 10,355,031.

The indicated acre-yield of lint cotton this year is 186.1 pounds, compared with 191.5 a month ago, 170.9 last year and 177.1, the 1924-33 average.

The indicated crop this year by States is Virginia, 32,000 bales; North Carolina, 600,000; South Carolina, 750,000; Georgia, 1,075,000; Florida, 29,000; Missouri, 200,000; Tennessee, 325,000; Alabama, 1,065,000; Mississippi, 1,255,000; Louisiana, 575,000; Texas, 3,250,000; Oklahoma, 625,000; Arkansas, 905,000; New Mexico, 85,000; Arizona, 127,000; California, 235,000; all other States 8,000 and Lower California (Old Mexico) 70,000, (latter not included in California figures nor in United States total).

Toronto Gold Stocks Jump on Tax Report

Toronto, Nov. 8 (AP).—Gold stocks jumped on the Toronto mining market today on a report that the federal government would within the next 48 hours cancel or reduce taxation on gold production.

Lake Shore rose $2.75 to $51, McIntyre, $1.40 to $36, Teck Hughes, 15 cents to $4.50, Wright Hargreaves, 20 cents to $7.40, and corresponding gains were made by the smaller golds. Other groups also turned strong.

A check, however, brought a denial from the federal minister of mines that he had made any such forecast.

Cotton Board Elects Three New Members

The Ticker Tape

By Carlton A. Shively

A Special Correspondent.

New York, Nov. 8.—Outside the public utility list, the stock market did not finish the day with as much gain in values as was threatened by the excited trading in the first hour. The Federal district court decision giving the public utility holding company act a blast of unconstitutionally acted as a strong incentive to buy stocks, and particularly the utilities. Wall Street saw in the court's action another hard blow at the New Deal, and hopes rose for a genuine knockout to the champions of weird economics and fancy experiments in political managed business and socialism. Turnover in stocks was around 3,400,000 shares, the largest since February 7 of last year. Utilities made up more than a third of the business. December wheat closed an eighth of a cent higher at 96⅝ cents a bushel.

Seldom has stock trading been so heavily concentrated in one group as it was today, and especially in the first hour, in the public utility section. Advances on heavy dealings ranged from a fraction to two points or more. After the first burst of buying the gains were reduced by profit-taking, and volume contracted, the turnover in the second hour being less than half that of the first hour. While excitement ruled in the utilities, other groups were left to shift for themselves, which they did with indifferent results.

Specialties Rise.

Toward the beginning of the third hour the rise in utility was resumed and other stocks revived. Mail order shares came forward on the Sears-Roebuck dividend increase. Steels were well liked. Bethlehem made a new high. U. S. Steel rose a point. Building stocks maintained their momentum, with Radiator leading. In the miscellaneous list, Commercial Solvents got under way and jumped 2 points on large volume. Congress Cigar climbed 2 points on a special dividend. Western Union exceeded last year's best price for the first time this year. General Electric and Westinghouse reached now tops.

Fractional losses were taken in the metals, tobaccos, merchants and rubbers. Oils were irregular. Amusements were firm. Chemicals dropped a point or two, but Union Carbide was an exception. Foods were mixed, responding uncertainly to the hope that the next court upset would be the AAA, which it was calculated would stimulate food shares.

Liquor stocks were higher, as was Corn Products. Trading in motors was sharply reduced, with irregular movements, and the same was true of the accessories, although Budd Wheel forged ahead. Rails were easier. Equipments advanced.

Foreign exchanges continued in their recent course. Gold money was lower, particularly francs, on renewed fears that devaluation shortly will reappear to plague capital that is harried by such action and rumors of it. Movements of funds to London helped sterling. Little disturbance was reported in the Orient, although the Hongkong dollar was allowed to slide further. That seems to be the policy of the authorities in order to restore British trade advantages with China, taking advantage of the opportunity given by China's abandonment of the silver standard and adoption of a managed paper currency.

In the domestic money market the position this week has not greatly changed. Money in circulation rose $69,000,000, which is not surprising on the combination of month-end demands and election day operations. At the same time the monetary gold stock increased $28,000,000 and member bank reserve balances expanded $18,000,000.

While the base of credit continues to expand, the situation still does not suggest actual inflation. Brokers' loans, as was to be expected from the month end and the boiling stock market, rose a little—$11,000,000—but in spite of the slight growth of a general credit in use in recent weeks, the total is lower than a year ago, both for securities account and for so-called commercial loans. This week Federal Reserve credit in use declined by $12,000,000.

Government bonds were not so soft as yesterday, but they continued somewhat disturbed. Whatever attention has been given throughout the country to the recent discussion of the theory of credit control, locally some Government bond dealers have been a bit perturbed. Perhaps they have been asked too many questions on their opinion. The best information is that, quite regardless of any general theory of deflation versus inflation, no action is at all likely to come in the direction of cutting down bank reserves.

Economic disarrangements through artificial methods to help one group have seldom been successful, often actually harmful to the group intended to be benefitted. Zinc Rises $2 a Ton On Heavy Purchases

New York, Nov. 8 (AP).—An advance in the price of zinc to 4.95 cents a pound, East St. Louis, was announced today by major producing interests. The new level is $2 a ton above the previous quotation.

The advance followed a heavy buying movement in the metal which started yesterday and continued at the opening of trading today. Increased demand was attributed to statistics reflecting better consumption and declining stocks. Galvanizers were reported particularly active on the buying side.

Freight Traffic For Week 11% Over Last Year

Total of 680,662 Cars Loaded Is 3.8% Less Than Previous Week.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended November 2 totaled 680,662 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 67,614 cars or 11.0 per cent above the corresponding week in 1934 and an increase of 66,526 cars or 10.8 per cent above the same week in 1933.

Loading of revenue freight for the week of November 2 was a decrease of 27,164 cars or 3.8 per cent below the preceding week this year, due to the usual seasonal decline in business.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 278,784 cars, a decrease of 6,594 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 43,651 cars above the corresponding week in 1934 and 51,910 cars above the same week in 1933.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 165,576 cars, a decrease of 613 cars below the preceding week, but 3,609 cars above the corresponding week in 1934. It was, however, a decrease of 6,392 cars below the same week in 1933.

Coal loading amounted to 125,483 cars, a decrease of 3,209 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 129 cars above the corresponding week in 1934, and 5,718 cars above the same week in 1933.

Grain Loadings Decline.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 33,364 cars, a decrease of 4,087 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 5,477 cars above the corresponding week in 1934 and 2,209 cars above the same week in 1933. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended November 2 totaled 21,834 cars, an increase of 4,629 cars above the same week in 1934.

Livestock loading amounted to 19,553 cars, a decrease of 1,736 cars below the preceding week, 5,015 cars below the same week in 1934 and 464 cars below the same week in 1933. In the Western districts alone, loading of livestock for the week ended November 2 totaled 15,738 cars, a decrease of 3,153 cars below the same week in 1934.

Forest products loading totaled 29,194 cars a decrease of 1,481 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 7,507 cars above the same week in 1934 and 6,013 cars above the same week in 1933

Ore loading amounted to 21,692 cars, a decrease of 9,769 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 10,985 cars above the corresponding week in 1934 and 6,614 cars above the corresponding week in 1933.

Coke loading amounted to 7,016 cars, an increase of 325 cars above the preceding week, 1,271 cars above the same week in 1934, and 918 cars above the same week in 1933.

All districts reported increases for the week of November 2 in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight compared not only with the corresponding week last year but also with the corresponding week in 1933.

Freight Car Surplus Shows 8,321 Decrease

Class I railroads on October 14 had 220,199 surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday.

This was a decrease of 8,321 cars compared with the number of such cars on September 30, at which time there were 228,520 surplus freight cars.

Canadian Industry Continues Advance

Toronto, Nov. 8.—In his review of October business in Canada, S. H. Logan, general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, says:

"The marked improvement in industrial conditions continued during the last month. This improvement, though more general than is usually witnessed in the autumn, has been most noticeable in the so-called heavy industries, such as those manufacturing industrial equipment, in which production was at the highest level of the year; in some major units production doubled over that of October, 1934."

Stockholders Ratify Holly Sugar Split-up

New York, Nov. 8 (AP).—Stockholders of the Holly Sugar Corporation at a special meeting today ratified the company's proposals for capital changes involving a split-up of the common stock, and a plan for special compensation for officers and certain employes.

The company will increase common stock from 100,000 to 500,000 shares to provide for a 5-to-1 split-up. At the same time preferred stock will be reduced from 53,000 shares to 31,800 shares.

U. S. Rubber Appeals Firestone Litigation

Cincinnati, Nov. 8 (AP).—The United States Rubber Co. asked the United States Circuit Court of Appeals here today for a rehearing of its patent litigation with the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., of Akron, Ohio.

Acting on cross-appeals from lower court rulings recently, the Circuit Court held Firestone to be "substantially" the victor in the dispute.

Curtiss-Wright Orders.

New York, Nov. 8 (AP).—Unfilled orders of Curtiss-Wright Corporation and subsidiaries increased to $7,728,676 on September 30 compared with $4,515,849 on January 1, last.

Gen. Motors October Biggest in 8 Years

New York, Nov. 8 (AP).—Total sales of General Motors Cars and trucks to dealers in the United States, Canada and over-seas shipments during October were reported today as the highest for that month since 1927. October sales to dealers in the United States were the best since that month in 1929. Sales of cars and trucks to consumers in the United States in October amounted to 68,566 units compared with 66,547 in September and 69,090 in October, 1934. Sales to consumers were influenced by fall automobile shows held in November this year instead of January as in the past, and opinion was that many prospective buyers held off until all new models were on display.

Wheat Advances On Eastern Buying

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—Late expansion of Eastern buying, associated with stock market strength, helped give a final upward trend to wheat values today.

Wheat in Chicago closed firm at the same as yesterday's finish to 1¼ cents higher, with corn ¼ off to ¼ up, oats unchanged to ⅛ advance, and provisions showing a rise of 5 to 7 cents.

Sears, Roebuck Votes Special 50c Dividend

Sales Since January Are Running at Highest Rate in 6 Years.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—The board of directors of Sears, Roebuck & Co. today voted a regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share and also a special dividend of the same amount. Both payable December 16 to stockholders of record November 22.

The dividends declared on the common stock today were the first since May, when a special of 75 cents a share was voted. Prior to that Sears had not declared a dividend since 1932, when $1.25 was paid to common share holders.

Sears sales have been running the highest in six years. For the period from January 30 to October 8 sales totaled $268,334,098, highest since 1929, compared with $215,734,766 in the corresponding period last year.

New York, Nov. 8.—The following dividends have been announced:

May Department Stores.

An extra dividend of 25 cents and the regular quarterly dividend of 40 cents on the common stock of the May Deparment Stores Co. were declared yesterday.

Bendix Aviation.

Directors of the Bendix Aviation Corporation declared yesterday a dividend of 25 cents. This is the first payment since April, 1932, when 15 cents was paid.

Link Belt.

A special dividend of 50 cents on the common stock was declared yesterday by the Link Belt Co. In September a dividend of 20 cents was disbursed. For the full year of 1935 the company will have paid a total of $1.20 a share on common.

United States Freight.

The United States Freight Co. has declared an extra dividend of 25 cents and the regular quarterly dividend of the same amount.

Hazeltine Corporation.

Directors declared an extra dividend of 50 cents and the regular quarterly disbursement of 25 cents. Both are payable December 16 to stock of record December 2.

Scrap Steel Up to $14.

New York, Nov. 8 (AP).—Steel circles report word from Pittsburgh today of a purchase of about 25,000 tons of No. 1 heavy melting steel scrap by a leading interest at $13.75 a gross ton. This purchase, they state, has lifted the quotation on this grade 50 cents to $13.50 to $14 a ton.

AUCTION SALES

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1935—
ADAM A. BECHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL'S SALE OF UNDIVIDED LEGAL INTEREST IN THE FOLLOWING REAL ESTATE.

By virtue of a writ of fieri facias issued upon the clerk's office of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia and to me directed, I will sell at public auction, for cash and subject to taxes and encumbrances of the courthouse on D street, between Fourth and Fifth streets northwest, Washington, D. C., on MONDAY, THE EIGHTEENTH DAY OF NOVEMBER, 1935, all the right, title and interest of the defendant in and to the following described real estate: The south 60 feet front on seventh street west by a depth of 72 feet of original lot 1, in square 436, being known for purposes of assessment and taxation as lot 800 in said square, improved by premises No. 1000 to 1004 Seventh street northwest; also lot 16 in subdivision by Francis P. R. Sands, trustee, in square 436, as per plat recorded in book 11 at page 45 of the records of the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia, improved by premises No. 703 Mount Vernon place northwest, seized and levied upon as the property of the defendant, William H. Saigual, and sold to satisfy judgment at law, No. 83278, in favor of Hannah M. Segar.

JOHN R. COLPOYS,
P—oct21,28-no1Sinc1.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1935—
THOS. J. OWEN & SON, & Auctioneers.
1431 Eye Street Northwest.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF TWO VALUABLE FRAME BUILDINGS BEING PREMISES NO. 4222 AND 4226 WISCONSIN AVENUE NORTHWEST, BEING SITUATED ON A LARGE LOT HAVING A FRONTAGE OF APPROXIMATELY 80 FEET ON WISCONSIN AVENUE BY DEPTH OF APPROXIMATELY 214 FEET; THE FRONT 100 FEET BEING ZONED FIRST COMMERCIAL AND THE REAR PORTION BEING ZONED RESIDENTIAL.

By virtue of a certain deed of trust duly recorded, in Liber No. 6792, folio 175 et seq., of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will sell, at public auction, in front of the premises on TUESDAY, THE NINETEENTH DAY OF NOVEMBER, A. D. 1935, at FOUR O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described land and premises, situate in the District of Columbia, and designated as part of a square of land called "Friendship," known as "Grasslands" and being part of lot 2 according to plat attached to partition deed between Benjamin P. Riley and Aquila Eld recorded in Liber R. M. H. 17, folio 62, of the Land Records of the District of Columbia, said part of lot 2 being described as follows: Beginning for the same at a point in the westerly line of Wisconsin avenue (120 feet wide), as widened by proceedings in Equity Cause No. 12563 in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, intersected by the southerly line of said lot 2, said point of intersection being distant northerly 106.48 feet, more or less, from the intersection of said line of said avenue with the northerly line of Van Ness street, as shown on plat filed with District Court Case No. 1947 in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia; thence along said line of Wisconsin avenue north 20 degrees 32 minutes 30 seconds west 59.20 feet more or less to the southerly line of the part of said lot 2 conveyed to David J. Coleman by deed recorded in Liber 1803, folio 410, of the land records of said District; thence along said Coleman's southerly line, south 72 degrees 30 minutes west 216.755 feet to the westerly line of said lot 2; thence along said westerly line, south 21 degrees 30 minutes east, 59.20 feet more or less, to the southwest corner of said lot; thence along the southerly line of said lot, north 72 degrees 30 minutes east, 216.755 feet, to the point of beginning.

NOTE: At the date hereof the above-described land is designated on the books of the Assessor of the District of Columbia, for taxation purposes, as lot 814 in square 1786.

Subject to the right of redemption by the maker of the aforesaid deed of trust, his heirs or assigns, within a period of 365 days from the date of sale, not excluding Sundays and holidays, as provided in said deed of trust.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase money to be paid in cash, the balance in two equal installments, payable in one and two years, with interest at five per centum per annum payable semiannually from day of sale, secured by first deed of trust upon the property sold, or all cash, at option of purchaser. A deposit of $500.00 will be required at time of sale. All conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps, etc., at cost of purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with within ten days from expiration of redemption period, otherwise the trustees reserve the right to resell the property, at the risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C.

Woman Is Near Death After Attack by Dogs

Anna Knox, 47, colored, of the 6000 block of Sylvan avenue, Fairmont Heights, Md., was taken to Emergency Hospital yesterday in serious condition after she was attacked by seven dogs near her home.

Her entire body was lacerated by the beasts, physicians said. Recovery is regarded as doubtful.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Hartford? Ugh! — By Harry J. Tuthill

By jove, Mr. Bungle, did I hear you say this fellow Oakdale pretended he recognized the name in my brother's will?
Wait...listen..also, that man who was cut...sitting on the lounge... thought old Hartford was Black Mort. Remember?
George Bungle, please let go of my arm.
Black Mort! By jove!
Also, here's more proof that Hartford is....
Oh Mr. Eldorado, you look so...please sit down.
Listen, I'm sure... I know..
George, please be quiet. Peggy honey, run and get Mr. Eldorado water.
Thank you, Mrs. Bungle. I'm all right now....this fellow Oakdale. Impossible! Utterly so.
